Another school year has rolled away, and again the college bell is silent and the dust is gathering on the benches. As we look back we see some mistakes; some things have not turned out as we could have wished; there are regrets; we may not have accomplished as much as we would have liked. In contrast to these shadowy vales as it were, are the bright uplands, and sun-kissed peaks of achievements gained; of hard tasks mastered; of purposes accomplished. This is life and it has been lived. A few more pages are written and are sealed. Regrets are vain.

Let us think of what has been accomplished, but not entirely forget the mistakes. Remember them through the years yet to come that they may be avoided in the future. Let us strive to make each succeeding year more satisfactory than the last. Fortune has seemed to smile upon the Old Gold and Navy Blue through the past year. The dread badge of quarantine has not been seen upon the college campus, and the mills of knowledge have ground steadily on through the falling leaves of autumn, the dreary never-ceasing rains of winter, and the bright sunshine of spring. Twice has the faculty been broken into by sickness and other causes, but each time worthy men have been found ready to step into the gap. 1905 will go down upon the record as a successful and profitable year in the history of P. C.

The students and all connected with the college will feel very keenly the loss of Prof. C. W. Kantner, head of the music department, who goes to Europe in the fall for further study. He has done much for us this year, and his able, enthusiastic work is appreciated. He is not only a thorough musician and an efficient instructor, but a Christian gentleman and an all round college man who has co-operated most heartily in all student enterprises. His place will indeed be hard to fill.

This issue of the Crescent is the last of the college year. We will now take a three months vacation and will then be with you again, we hope, better than ever before. The Crescent thanks its many friends for the kindness shown it during the past year and hopes that when the summer has rolled away it will be able to greet you all again.

Local and Personal.
