GEORGE FOX COLLEGE

June, 1971

Alternate, Faster Route To Diploma Approved

An alternate route to education enabling students to accelerate or adapt their degree programs will be started by George Fox this fall.

Still somewhat experimental with assessments to be continually made, the program will allow students to receive credit for courses they do not actually take.

The credit by examination program will offer some 150 hours of credit possibilities in 22 different courses.

Current catalog policy will allow students up to 24 hours of course credit through a testing program in cooperation with the College Level Examination Program or other national testing services.

George Fox faculty members will establish prerequisites, scores and percentiles required for credit. Persons will take the examination either on campus or at a regional testing center. If they meet the George Fox standards set for the course, they will be given credit for that subject as if they had taken the full lecture series.

Examinations, starting with the fall term, will be given once each term on campus. There will be a $5 per credit hour fee with a minimum of $25 charged if the student achieves scores sufficiently high to receive credit.

The program is experimental at George Fox "and as such is subject to review and modification," according to Dean of Faculty Arthur O. Roberts.

Subjects initially approved for the credit by examination program are history of American education, educational psychology, English composition, English literature, American literature, general biology, general chemistry, algebra-trigonometry, introductory calculus, Bible literature, principles of accounting, business law, introduction to economics, money and banking, civilizations, United States history, American government, general psychology, human growth and development, statistics, tests and measurements, and introduction to sociology.

Edith Green Boosts Small Colleges

Church-related colleges received a strong boost from Oregon Congresswoman Edith Green (Dem-Ore.) as she addressed more than 1,400 persons attending the eightieth annual George Fox commencement ceremonies.

"The strength of higher education in our country is in the dual system of private and public colleges," she said.

"I think that there are certain values we find in the small, church-related colleges that we do not find in other colleges and universities," she said.

"If it is administration policy this year to bail out Penn Central [Railroad] and to bail out Lockheed, then it seems to me to be equally in the national interest to bail out colleges and universities in this country that are facing financial disaster," she said.

Mrs. Green said her education committee is working on a bill to provide institutional aid with specific consideration to the small college.

In her address to one of the largest commencement audiences ever, the Oregon Congresswoman said "the United States is facing the greatest crisis it has faced since the Civil War."

"My mail would indicate that middle income Americans are very, very close to revolt," she said. "They are not eligible for public housing or comprehensive medical services or free legal aid, or day care centers or headstart."

Despite a somewhat pessimistic outlook, Mrs. Green said she believes the U.S. has "turned the corner in reordering national priorities." She cited congressional defeat of the Supersonic Transport project and cutbacks in space programs.

Cutbacks in spending in these areas, she said, would allow federal resources to be used in "rational and socially meaningful programs and the choices are as broad as they are important."

She suggested better health programs, more educational funding, and contributions toward meaningful life for the elderly.

Mrs. Green said the nation can improve if it does not permit itself to "wallow in self-pity" because of the complex problems and if it doesn't "bury itself in the national death wish of national resignation."

Space Chief Speaks at Commencement Dinner

Walter Burke

Adults in America should have more faith in the younger generation, the head of one of the nation's largest aircraft industries says.

Speaking at the twelfth annual George Fox $50-a-plate Commencement Dinner, Walter F. Burke, president of McDonnell Douglas Astronautics Co., said "there's going to be an end to this resentment and apparent rebellion just as soon as people our age really get wise and give them a chance to do something."

Burke devoted the major part of his talk to telling the adult audience to have faith in the younger generation.

Burke heads a space-age oriented industry in which he says the average age "outside of a few of us grandfathers" is 27.

"So anytime you think the young people in this country can't get something done of a vast nature, I think you should stop for a moment and reconsider that," he reminded.

"There's no reason in the world to think that we can't take our next problem, whatever it might be, and equally successfully accomplish it, if you but give young people the support they need, and if you but bolster their courage and talk with them

Board Reaffirms Ideal College Size of 800; Adopts Budget

George Fox College board members have reaffirmed their commitment to build to an ideal student body of 800 students with an ultimate faculty student ratio of 1:19.

Meeting in annual session on the campus, the Board of Trustees approved moving from the present 1:12 ratio to the new figure.

At the same time, the board approved a record $1.5 million budget for the coming fiscal year, an increase over the present $1,375,000.

President David Le Shana said the board tried to make as conservative a budget as possible, at the same time deciding to seek broadened support across the nation.

He praised the increased support for the college in the current year, noting giving to all funds of the college is up more than 50 percent in the last year, reaching nearly $300,000.

During the year a record number of foundations gave to the college, the board learned.

Granted tenure by the board were Dr. David Myton, professor of education and director of teacher education and a professor since 1966, and Dr. Dale Orkney, associate professor of biology and a faculty member since 1965.

Dr. Sheldon Louthan was promoted to full professor. A faculty member since 1963, he is director of counseling, testing and guidance at the college.

Nationwide Talent Search Selects GFC's Swanson

Freshman Dave Swanson, selected in a nationwide talent search, will tour the country during the next year for Youth for Christ.

In his tennis shoes and track workout clothes, Dave Swanson tried out for one of the biggest opportunities of his life.

And the 19-year-old California native made it. Beginning this month Swanson will travel nationwide with a contemporary sound music group. He's one of eight selected after a national talent search.

The George Fox freshman will be a baritone-tenor vocalist and organist for the group. Although the components of the four-boy, four-girl group have not met each other, they begin to put together their sound July 26 when they travel to Wheaton, Ill., headquarters for Youth for Christ International (YFC).

During the next year Swanson and the group will travel from city to city and campus to campus singing before young audiences for YFC.

Swanson's selection for the national tour? Quite by accident, he says, even though it's been a lifelong dream.

A talent scout for YFC came to George Fox to hear another musical group. He inquired if there were any other groups that also would like to be auditioned while he was on campus.

Someone remembered Swanson and his newly formed singing group and ran around campus rounding up the members. Swanson, a sprinter on the Bruin track squad, was found on the college's track dressed in his workout "sweats." Not bothering to change in fear of missing his opportunity, Swanson raced for the college's auditorium for his appearance.

Clothes don't necessarily make the man, Swanson decided when he received notice of his selection for the new singing group. Ironically, the groups originally trying out were not selected. "He told us they seldom pick whole groups," Swanson says.

Swanson's selection means the folks back home (San Bernardino, Calif.) will have to do without their favorite singer for a bit longer. At the age of 19, Swanson is choir director and organist for his home church—Temple Baptist in San Bernardino—and has his own singing group at home "The Swanson Singers" that sings contemporary gospel numbers. That group will also continue to wait while Swanson tours.

The young musician says he started singing at five years with his church groups. In high school he directed talent shows and sang in religious-oriented groups. And music runs in the family. His father, an insurance agent, is a trumpeter; his mother, a retired school teacher, is a singer and his older brother and sister both play the piano and organ.

Planning to return to George Fox after his tour, Swanson, a music education major, says the singing venture "is a lifelong dream. I'm really happy. I'll miss the kids here, but it's what I've always wanted to do."

His goal is ultimately to be a professional musician—on the religious scene. But in Newberg, basketball fans and concert goers already know him as a vocalist for "pop" music provided at basketball half-times and stage band performances.

No name has been chosen yet for the new singing group. Swanson says he's told it will have a drummer and lead and bass guitarists in addition to his piano and organ.

George Fox Is Site Of Cultural Camps

The George Fox campus this summer is the site of the seventh annual Summer Cultural Camp sponsored by Young Musicians and Artists, Inc.

Attending the two sessions are youth in grades three through eight from Oregon, Washington and California. Participants in the first session (June 20-July 2) for music are taught instrumental techniques, orchestra and theory. The second session (July 4-July 16) offers art, drama and creative movement.

In both sessions students take part in German, physical fitness and vocal music.

It is believed to be the only program on the West Coast offering cultural arts instruction within a camp setting. The sponsoring organization is a nonprofit, nonsectarian organization based in Portland.

Le Shana Says Greatness Needed

"It is at this very moment that there is a time of great opportunity. I believe that there is no greater hour to be alive in all of human history than this hour into which you as a class are now entering," President David Le Shana told 91 graduating seniors in annual baccalaureate services.

Addressing nearly 800 persons, Le Shana told the class it is entering into a world that is dazed and confused, especially because of contra-

Five New Board Members Picked

Four new members and four incumbents have been nominated to the 42-member George Fox College Board of Trustees. Official election of the new members awaits annual sessions of Northwest Yearly Meeting of Friends in August.

Nominated by the board itself are Dr. Stanley Kern, a Newberg physician; Dolph Ballantyne, executive secretary Evangelical Church of North America, Portland; and Dr. Walter Burke, president of McDonnell Douglas Astronautics Co., Huntington Beach, Calif.

Renominated by the board were Elizabeth Edwards, a Newberg homemaker; David Leach, new pastor of Friends Memorial Church, Seattle; and Floyd Watson, a Eugene banker.

Members of the Alumni Association have renominated Norman Winters, Supt. of Schools, Melba, Idaho, and selected Ralph Beebe, Eugene, Ore., author and school teacher, for the first time.

dictions and frustrations of trying to solve pressing problems.

In his first major commencement-related address since becoming president, Le Shana said the world is looking for great men and great women to answer world needs and not better methods—"Men and women who are great in skills and who are great in vision and who are alert to the needs of the hour and have the courage and the daring to be great."

"God's love, God's grace and God's power are available to make you great if you, as an individual, can have the daring and the courage to put faith in action, for this is a time for greatness," the former Quaker pastor said.

To the audience in the Newberg High School fieldhouse, Le Shana said now is the time for a greatness in worship, in witnessing and in living.

New Computer Will Expand Teaching, Office Capabilities

Six years ago George Fox became one of the first colleges of less than a thousand students to acquire a computer.

The college has now taken another step forward, adding a second computer to greatly expand teaching and administrative capabilities and making it one of only a few small colleges with two computers.

Main use of the new computer, a $26,000 Pacific Data Systems machine, will be for registration and grade reports and for accounting in association with the college's business office.

With two machines, one will always be free for teaching use, and in case of heavy peak loads two will be able to speed up needed processing.

"If the Christian colleges are to survive, they must be strong as centers of learning and vigorous as centers of Christian worship. What's true of an institution must be true of an individual," he said.

On witnessing, the president said, "When you go back through church history, you will discover that at most times in history those who were responsible for the propagation of the Gospel and responsible for the spread of the church were not the one or two or three great men, but again and again it was the rank and file."

"Become involved in the need of humanity to put reality into the world, to demonstrate authenticity as a real person who has found a purpose in life," Le Shana told the graduates. "Life can be great if it's God-centered," he said.

The latest computer is the gift from an anonymous donor. The first was also a gift, from California businessman Lowell Edwards, a George Fox alumnus and inventor of the Starr-Edwards heart valve.

Director of Computer Services Gerald Edwards says the second computer will give the college not only faster service but more information.

Technically, the computer is a Model 1020, general purpose, stored program, serial, decimal digital computer. It is capable of reading 50 characters a second from paper tape input.

Alumnus of Year Award Presented to Willcuts

Northwest Yearly Meeting Superintendent Jack L. Willcuts receives plaque and citation naming him 1971 George Fox College Alumnus of the Year from Alumni Association President Brian Beals. Alumni Executive Director Gene Hockett (left), made the announcement in annual banquet ceremonies.

Jack L. Willcuts, head of the 6,000 member Northwest Yearly Meeting of Friends Church and president of the national Evangelical Friends Alliance, is the 1971 George Fox College Alumnus of the Year. He received the award in special Alumni Day ceremonies on campus.

Willcuts, a Friends minister for 25 years, is a 1944 George Fox graduate. For the last five years Willcuts, a Dundee resident, has been superintendent of the organization of 62 churches in Oregon, Washington and Idaho. He is currently executive editor of the national Friends publication Evangelical Friend.

Recently elected as chairman of the Oregon State Association of the National Association of Evangelicals, Willcuts, 49, this month becomes a member of the pastoral team of the Reedwood Friends Church in Portland as he completes his term as superintendent.

In addition to missionary service, Willcuts has served as pastor of churches in Rockaway, Ore.; North-east Tacoma, Wash.; North Second Friends; West Chehalem Friends in Newberg, and Medford, Ore. He and his wife Geraldine served two four-year terms in Bolivia, where two of their three children were born.

On the mission field, Willcuts served his first two years as a pastor in La Paz, Bolivia, and the other six as field secretary of evangelism for the Friends Church, guiding the growth of churches from 12 to 82.

For the Northwest Yearly Meeting Willcuts has served two years as president of the Board of Stewardship, three years as field secretary and two years as president of the Board of Evangelism, and 12 years as editor of the Northwest regional magazine Northwest Friend.

Black Alumnus Jumps Race Hurdle

A George Fox alumnus has become one of the first blacks in North Carolina to be admitted to a Kiwanis Club.

And the 64-year-old Allan D. Rutherford, a 1933 graduate, is being honored with the naming of an elementary school for him.

The southern educator was inducted into a Kiwanis Club in Statesville, N.C., population 30,000. He serves as the "first black member in town, maybe in the whole state," Rutherford reports.

He recalls that about 15 years ago when he addressed Kiwanians, blacks were not allowed in the hotel where the club met, so members had to cross the street to hear him in the City Hall.

The elementary school named for Rutherford has four black teachers and 21 percent black students. "My name is over the door, and my portrait is inside," Rutherford says, "and I'm still alive—usually you have to die before they name a school after you."

"It's like looking at your own tombstone," he adds, "until you get used to it."

The honors are not the first for Rutherford. In 1967 he was the first black picked to receive the Mayor's Distinguished Citizens Award for community service in Statesville.

Rutherford began classes at George Fox in 1929 when the college was named Pacific. "When I went to Pacific they made it clear they didn't know where they would place me for student teaching," he says. "It was unheard of in those days for a Negro to teach around here."

But the problem was solved when the college gave Rutherford credit for two years he had taught in New Jersey following a short two-year course at New Jersey State Normal School.

In college Rutherford was vice-president of the student body and majored in secondary education.

Beals Reelected Alumni Head; Association Okays Agent Plan

Brian Beals (G65), a Hillsboro, Ore., school teacher, will continue as president of the George Fox Alumni Association.

In its annual meeting (Alumni Day, June 5) the Alumni Board reelected Beals and vice-president Bill Hopper (G58), Tillamook, Ore. Hopper also will serve as alumni fund chairman. Mrs. Jack (Phyllis George) Kirkwood (G59), Beaverton, Ore., was reelected secretary and given the chairmanship of the achievement and awards committee.

New chairman of the continuing education committee is Howard Crow, Spokane, Wash. Mrs. Lyle (Naomi Martin) Wilson (G58), Newberg, becomes chairman of the alumni student-recruitment committee and Phil Roberts, Prineville, Ore., was named chairman of the placement committee and the constitution committee.

Elected to the alumni board by mailed ballots were Dean Rinard (G70), Tigard, Ore., Clair Smith (G50), Caldwell, Idaho, and Edith Cammack (G66), Baker, Ore. They will serve three-year terms.

A class agent approach will be used by the Alumni Association in the next year in a step to personalize contact with the school's alumni, the board decided.

Each graduating class will have an agent or representative selected by the alumni fund committee. That person will serve as a contact with the alumni office in the raising of funds for projects designated by the alumni association for the advancement of the college.

The program is to start this summer with the selection of representatives.

At the same time preparations are underway to initiate a program to designate area representatives in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, California and Colorado to serve with the alumni office in aiding the college admissions department.

Eight to ten persons will be trained on campus Oct. 8 and 9 in special workshops on student recruiting. Representatives have not yet been selected.

Hockett Selected For Honors Book

George Fox College Alumni Director Gene Hockett has been notified of his selection for listing in the "National Register of Prominent Americans."

Hockett, who became head of the college's alumni organization in 1969, is a former Friends Church pastor with pastorates in West Chehalem near Newberg (1962-69) and Metolius, Ore., (1954-62).

He is a 1951 George Fox graduate, with a divinity degree from Western Evangelical Seminary.

Selection for the national publication was made by an advisory board based on submission of qualifications.

On a ten-week singing tour throughout the West this summer is one of the campus's newest musical groups, "Friendship VII."

Friendship VII on Tour Of Five Western States

Friendship VII, one of George Fox's newest singing ensembles, is spending the summer "on the road" for the college.

Over a ten-week period ending Aug. 21, the seven-member group will tour through five states making appearances in more than 30 churches and in eight camps and conferences in Oregon, California, Idaho, Montana and Colorado.

Group members are Meredith Mitchell, Whittier, Calif.; Ken Royal, North Highlands, Calif.; Marcia Morse, Hayden Lake, Idaho; Mark Moore, Salem, Ore.; Sharon Fodge, Caldwell, Idaho; Randy Thornburg, Burundi, Africa, and Martha Davenport, Caldwell, Idaho.

The July-August schedule is:

about their plans," Burke told the 260 persons attending the fund-raising dinner.

Burke, who holds the NASA medal for public service and who guided the Mercury project for McDonnell Douglas, said today's college youth are "well trained, they have excellent willingness to work and all the so-called rebellion you think you see while they are undergraduates very quickly vanishes when they get in the mainstream of having to earn a living."

Recent youth activity has "just been a period of growing through that part of their lives where they want to do something a little different and they haven't been given a real challenge as of the moment," Burke said.

Burke illustrated portions of his address with slides and models of spacecraft and projects of his California firm.

Proceeds from the twelfth annual dinner (about $10,000) are placed in the college's annual (general) fund.

Federal Grant Will Aid ACCO Program Colleges

A $100,000 Title III federal grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has been awarded to George Fox in conjunction with the Associated Christian Colleges of Oregon program.

The grant is nearly one-third larger than the $69,000 awarded to the colleges a year ago.

Funds will continue seven programs at George Fox, both in conjunction with and independent of Warner Pacific College of Portland.

Continued will be the college's social work program in cooperation with Warner Pacific and another program in economics. Both involved shared professors who teach at both colleges.

New funds will provide for a study leave for English professor Sam Sherrill, who will be studying next year on a doctoral program, and will provide for his replacement in the department.

Also funded will be a summer stipend program for several faculty members who will be engaged in a program of developing courses in cooperation with the college's media department.

A program for the continued recruitment of minority students will be backed under the new funds and the college will be allowed to continue its relationship with the Chicago-based consulting firm Gonsler Gerber Tinker and Stuhr, which helps the college with long-range planning.

Environmental Field Station To Be Created With NSF Aid

George Fox is one of nine Oregon colleges to share in a $137,000 grant from the National Science Foundation to begin an environmental field station in the Malheur National Wildlife Refuge in Harney County, Oregon.

A former Job Corps center will be converted to a field research station to study the geological, ecological and biological characteristics of southeastern Oregon.

Faculty members from the schools will teach at the center during the summer with personnel to be at the station the rest of the year for field trips and short courses of specialized interest.

The bulk of the money will be for field and classroom equipment and faculty salaries, with little renovation to be needed for the center. It has dormitory facilities for 224 students, a dining hall, kitchen and some classroom buildings.

George Fox students have used the site for the last several years, with ornithology classes taking field trips there in the spring. One group spent several days at the wildlife refuge in late April.

Dr. Elver Voth, George Fox professor of biology, has coordinated George Fox plans and spent nearly two years in background work and application preparations.

Modern Art and Music Has Important Function

Modern art and modern music, even though at times not a pleasant experience, may have an even more important function than traditional works that seem more pleasant.

That's the view of Dennis Hagen, chairman of the George Fox division of fine arts. Delivering the college's sixteenth annual faculty lecture, Hagen said modern expressions "through surrealism and through electronic sounds can lead us into avenues of the subconscious which before have never been heard."

"Perhaps these approaches can tell us something about ourselves which has been heretofore unknown," he added.

"If we would view modern art and music as an avenue in which we are inquiring into the human spirit, then perhaps our views toward them would not be negative but positive," Hagen said.

In his address "The Aesthetics of Contemporary Music," Hagen, a faculty member since 1964, said that in the past art and music were supposed to provide an uplifting or entertaining experience for the spectator or listener. It was to create a feeling of goodwill.

With the advent of expressionism in art, there can now be a new approach, however, according to Hagen. "I think it would best be said that aesthetically the painters and composers are trying to create for us an emotional experience of involvement rather than simply a good feeling."

Listeners will not be able to understand the new music easily, Hagen admits, because "our ears are programmed to the old rules and until they are unglued from the system, we will never grasp the new music."

Hagen said he got the idea for his lecture topic because of the "difficulty which we all face in trying to grasp something meaningful in modern arts."

In his illustrated lecture, Hagen, currently associate professor of music, presented and compared the various forms and styles of 20th century music and art forms.

He is currently a doctoral candidate at Indiana University and is Oregon chairman of the College Band Directors' National Association.

Bruin Thinclads Rewrite Track Record Books

George Fox senior Dave McDonald is the nation's third best pole vaulter in NAIA competition, and the best in Oregon small college competition with a top effort of 15' 8".

Top Sports Awards Claimed By Fields, Morgan, Winston

George Fox's star basketball forward Eddie Fields was the only double winner as athletic awards were passed out to Bruin sportsmen.

The Sunnyside, Wash., native who now makes Newberg his home received the college's most valuable player award and most inspirational trophy for basketball.

Victoria, B.C., junior Dave Morgan claimed the MVP award for baseball and sophomore Randy Winston took MVP honors for track.

Fields, the Bruins' best playmaker in the cage sport with 120 assists in the season, was fourth in scoring with 11.77 points a game and used his 6-4 height to become the third highest rebounder, averaging 7.3 a night.

In baseball Morgan, who will play in the Pan American games in Columbia this summer for Canada, was nominated for diamond activities that included a .365 batting average.

He knocked in 23 teammates for scores, to lead all players. He was second in putouts with 88 and led all players with assists (34). The junior pitcher had a 2-4 season on the mound.

Winston, who captured third in NAIA District 2 competition with a triple jump of 44-4 and has jumped nearly 45-6 was given the track trophy. The Battle Ground, Wash., sophomore, who also competes in the high jump, earlier earned Coach Rich Allen's designation as "Mr. Decathlon."

Baseballers Win More Than Ever

George Fox baseballers lived up to Coach Bob Brown's predictions for a winning season—by one game. And the Bruin diamond men won more games than any GFC team has won in one season before.

How does the first-year coach take the season outcome? "Modestly" is the word. "It was a step in the right direction," Brown says after turning his team around from a 5-12 season a year ago to a winning 11-10 record this spring.

"We're not there yet, but it was a start," Brown says. And he has a lot on which to reflect—from the errorless play of catcher-pitcher Dave Morgan in 21 games, to a 4-2 pitching record of Eddie Fields and the .537 batting average of catcher Mick Gwilym, who at 33 was the oldest player on the squad and the only player to be lost by graduation.

Team-wise, the Bruins hit at a .324 clip compared to .234 for opponents. They racked up 118 runs to 76 for their foes, had 192 hits compared to their opponents' 139 and stole 33 bases, three times that of opposing teams.

Bruin thinclads, in a strong show of their abilities, rewrote nearly one-third of the George Fox track recordbook in one season.

Under coach Rich Allen the Bruins set eight new marks and tied two others. A lion's share of the credit goes to freshman distance man Ken Bell.

The speedy harrier at one time held four George Fox records: mile, two mile, three mile and six mile. In the last meet of the season the Tonasket, Wash., runner relinquished the three-mile title to Newberg freshman Curt Ankeny, who set the new level at 14:55.5 for the distance.

Bell's mile time is 4:22.9. His two-mile mark is 9:31.9. But Bell's main claim to fame is a six-mile mark of 30:49.0, a clocking that is the best in Oregon NAIA District 2 competition and earned him a spot in NAIA national competition in Billings, Montana.

Dave McDonald twice tied his lifetime best in the pole vault. His 15-8 efforts made him the Northwest's premier pole vaulter and the nation's third best pole vaulter in the NAIA.

McDonald, a Seattle senior, earned his national ranking in NAIA championships in Montana after leading all Northwest competition throughout the season.

Junior Ray Wilson, in his first throw of the year for the Bruins, calmly walked up and threw the javelin 208 feet one inch to snap the existing GFC record of 195 feet set in 1958 by Gary Smith.

In the mile relay, a team of Harry Selby, Caldwell, Idaho; Bill Jackson, Seattle; Mike DiGioia, Tigard, Ore.; and John Holton, Caldwell, Idaho; set the new mark at 3:30.9 breaking a year old time of 3:33.0.

STUDENT BODY

Stan Morse, a Camas, Wash., junior will guide the George Fox student body next year.

Morse, the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Morse, Camas, was student body vice-president during the last school year. He is a chemistry major.

Dale Hadley, a Newport, Ore., junior business-economics major, was elected vice-president and Sharon Dunlap, a Eugene, Ore., junior psychology major, secretary. New treasurer is Kathy Haisch, a biology major from Vancouver, Wash.

Other officers elected are Patt Martin, Caldwell, Idaho, and Marilyn May, Vancouver, Wash., co-directors of student activities; Mark Moore, Salem, director of organizations, and Dave Sargent, Battle Ground, Wash., chief justice of student court.

Student officials administer a budget of nearly $30,000.

CLASS PRESIDENTS

Idaho, Oregon and California men will lead next year's class organizations.

New senior class president is John Hill, a biology major from Caldwell, Idaho. Junior class president is Steve flat, fell when Keith Merritt, a sophomore from Yakima, Wash., traveled the distance in 22.8. The mark had been equaled five times in the past but never broken since 1898.

A 10:58.7 time in the distance medley established in 1968 fell when a new team ran the course in 10:49.0. Members were Ankeny, DiGioia, Holton and Bell.

Freshman Dave Swanson in the annual May Day relays tied the 1902 time of .05.6 in the 50-yard dash.

Teamwise, the Bruins in district championships finished in fourth spot—higher than any other private college in Oregon.

Distance runner Ken Bell, as a first year Bruin, set three new school records—in the mile, two-mile and six-mile and raced his way to NAIA finals.

Hoerauf, a music education major from Lacombe, Ore., and Dan Hull, a biology major from Yorba Linda, Calif., is the new sophomore class president.

STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

Editors for George Fox student publications have been selected for the coming year by the joint student-administrative publications committee.

Editing the Crescent student newspaper will be Charles Howard, a freshman religion major from Clackamas, Ore. Howard, a 1970 graduate of Clackamas High School, has been a reporter on the staff for the current school year and has a high school journalism background.

Coeditors for the yearbook L'Ami will be Roxie Calvert and Linden Bright. Mrs. Calvert, a junior physical education major, is from Kelso, Wash. Miss Bright is a junior history major from Yreka, Calif. Both have yearbook staff experience.
