1978-79 PRESIDENT'S ANNUAL REPORT

GEORGE FOX COLLEGE
Newberg, Oregon

Supplement to
George Fox College LIFE
Volume 9, Number 5

The 1978-79 academic and fiscal year at George Fox College was one of growth. The College grew in enrollment, in its campus facilities with two new buildings, and in finances with a balanced budget and continued fiscal expansion. But most important, there was evidence of spiritual and academic growth. Such evidence is seen in the lives of the people who are the essence of George Fox College.

This year's successes testify to God's faithfulness. Yet God has worked through people—people committed in their stewardship to share in this endeavor. We have a good college because we have good people: administrators, staff, faculty, students, and our alumni, and many donors and supporters.

It is people who make a college such as George Fox. This report, while dealing with facts and figures and tangible assessments of growth, is a testimony of praise to our God for His superintendency over the entire enterprise. To Him is due the honor and glory. George Fox College is His work, and He has again proved himself faithful.

As I share with you this report—which touches only the highlights—I am convinced that George Fox College does more than merely exist; it is alive and well! As we look now to the decade ahead, this institutional vitality can be maintained only if we take seriously the WORD of God as our foundation, the WORK of God as our obligation, and the WILL of God as our direction.

George Fox College is a commitment made generations ago by pioneers seeking Christian higher education for youth. It is still our commitment, and as we look to the future we count upon your continued commitment and support.

David C. LeShana

ACADEMIC:

George Fox College opened its 88th academic year with a record enrollment of 715 students, as it continues to be one of the Northwest's fastest growing colleges. Enrollment has grown by 50 percent in the last five years. Each term continued at a record level of registration with the fall term full-time equivalent enrollment (based on 15 credit hours) at 685. For the first time in the College's history, the student credit hours for fall term, including the miniterm, passed the 10,000 level at 10,243. A total of 28,834 credit hours were taken in the three terms of 1978-79.

Who's coming to George Fox to make it grow so rapidly? An analysis by the registrar's office shows 72 percent of the incoming freshman students have a "B" average or above, 27 percent above a 3.5 level. Students came from 23 states, ranging from Florida to Alaska and New York to Hawaii. Five foreign countries were represented. Together, the four western states of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and California contributed 93 percent of the students with 71 percent of the student body coming from Oregon.

Although the College was founded and is still governed by the Friends Church (Northwest Yearly Meeting), more than 35 denominations were represented on campus. Quaker students composed 26 percent of the student body, 16 percent of the students were Baptist, and 11 percent members of the Evangelical Church of North America. Those three denominations accounted for just over half (53.7 percent) of all students.

The 1978-79 academic year began in mid-September with the annual fall faculty conference with Ted Ward, professor of curriculum research at the Institute for International Studies for the College of Education at Michigan State University, as the primary speaker. The conference was at the White Branch Campground in the Cascades of Oregon. Discussions, reports, and presentations by administrative leaders highlighted the sessions, with special emphasis on informal conversations and free time for sharing in the process of building community.

The fall miniterm, "Biblical Views of Creation," was the opening academic program of the year. Primary speaker for the week was Dr. Richard Bube of Stanford University, editor of the Journal of the American Scientific Affiliation. George Fox professors and other off-campus lecturers also participated in this time of continuing to emphasize the integration of faith and learning.

Although classes started Oct. 5, the formal opening came Oct. 20 with the traditional convocation, this year featuring Dr. James M. Houston, president of Regent College, Vancouver, B.C. But the date also had special significance, for it marked the official completion of the new Milo C. Ross Center, a total renovation of the former Hester Gym, in a "recycling" to become the new home for the music and religion divisions. Board chairman Eugene Coffin, chaplain of the Garden Grove (Calif.) Community Church, participated in dedication ceremonies, along with former President Ross and his wife Alice.

In the areas of special programs the College's Independent Study Courses program had a major breakthrough with the addition of eight new courses and with the development and approval of an additional course to be used toward meeting the new certification requirements for Oregon teachers. More than 200 teachers enrolled in one or more courses, with the College servicing teachers from Oregon and Washington. The College now offers home study for teachers in science and language arts as well as mathematics.

The Field Education program (Kellogg Project) for experiential education continues to grow in both student and faculty internships. The objective of the program, begun three years ago with a $125,000 grant, is to translate the theory of the classroom into practice, to develop knowledge and skills in the working community, to integrate relevant examples with the instructional program and establish professional rapport with segments of the business community. During the year over 200 students were enrolled in field experience situations, and the College now has over 100 cooperating agencies with whom students may be placed. As part of the program, six faculty members during the summer spent 5 to 10 weeks in business and industry learning how they operate so as to better relate their needs to the students.

This year marked the 21st for the College's successful Intensified Studies program, which allows accelerated learning for gifted youth, and 21 were participating in special seminars and in progress with original research and study. The Women's Studies program sponsored the fourth annual Women's Awareness Conference in April with the theme "Outlook for Women in the Eighties." The College's Continuing Education program again drew senior citizens to regular courses on a tuition-free basis, and in cooperation with Northwest Yearly Meeting the College sponsored the second Christian Education Conference, held in February. Nearly 400 persons attended, including participants from 36 churches. Guest speaker was Dr. Vernon Grounds, president of the Conservative Baptist Seminary, Denver, Colo. The conference featured 36 workshops.

For the sixth year the College participated with some of the nation's leading evangelical Christian colleges in the Christian College Consortium, with emphasis on the integration of faith, learning and living and upon cooperative endeavors. Six George Fox students attended a term on other campuses during the year, and the College hosted two students from other consortium schools. Two George Fox students enrolled in the Christian College Consortium's Washington, D.C., fall study term.

Dedicated Christian professors, of course, are the heart of the George Fox educational experience. The faculty this year included 35 full-time professors and 36 persons on a part-time basis. Sixty percent of the full-time faculty have earned doctorates. These committed, competent, and caring persons are involved in a wide range of professional activity in addition to their classroom teaching. They have participated in professional associations, written articles and reports, collected data in research, conducted workshops in their areas and won awards for their activities—all of this in addition to the George Fox emphasis on classroom teaching.

The average class size during the year was 24.8 and the faculty/student ratio was 1 to 16 with a goal of 1 to 20. It is important to keep in mind that our primary goal is for a college of quality and significance and the ratio goal is a secondary goal, reflecting stewardship and good management.

The 88th academic year closed June 2 with commencement ceremonies featuring former White House aide Jeb Stuart Magruder, now on leave from Young Life to study toward a divinity degree at Princeton Theological Seminary. Baccalaureate services featured Norval Hadley, superintendent of Northwest Yearly Meeting since 1971, who left the same day as his speech for his new post as Director of Church Relations for World Vision International. Magruder addressed the 122 graduates on the topic "The World in Crisis: A Christian Response," and Hadley spoke on "What in the World Is God Doing?"

The College's retreat and conference center, Tilikum, completed its fourth year as a special ministry of the College. During the school year nearly 300 George Fox students took part in 11 retreats ranging from minority students to engaged couples. Students also use the 75-acre center for quiet times and for classes in physical education and Christian camping. In May Tilikum was notified of its selection for one of the top honors available in Christian camping, the "Excelling" designation by Christian Camping International. Tilikum is the first West Coast and second center west of the Mississippi to receive the award.

In April the College became the first in Oregon to receive approval by the Oregon Teachers Standards and Practices Commission under its new regulations.

STUDENT LIFE:

The integration of faith and learning and living is what a Christian higher education provides and, at George Fox College, while the learning comes under the academic area for this report, the faith and living are considered in the student life area. It's a broad sweep of activities, ranging from career planning and financial aid to living situations and health care. It also concerns religious life, athletics, the wide scope of student activities and, in essence, anything outside of the classroom itself.

Participation may be the key word in describing the students. They are involved in music, drama, sports, publications, deputation, Bible study and in projects to help others.

More than 250 students during the year were involved in deputation teams throughout the Northwest, traveling in small groups, sometimes at their own expense, to minister to churches. Students work through the chaplain's office and are briefed first in proper protocol, timing, and programming and possible problems. Students ministered in local rest homes and to nearby elderly, taught Sunday school classes and tutored special students. Students also reached out through the music group "Dayspring," and the drama troupe, "Inter-Mission."

Students were involved in 12 discipleship groups on campus and in 17 Bible study, prayer and sharing groups organized in living units. As a result of Missions Week students raised more than $1,000 to help send 10 students on summer missionary assignments around the world.

Although the entire intent is to help others and show Christ's love, the students also gained considerable attention for their giving away of more than $5,000, representing a 10 percent tithe of their total student government budget. They helped a brain-damaged Newberg child who needed special treatment in Philadelphia, assisted a minority family in Portland that had undergone a series of unfortunate incidents, assisted the fund drive to improve the Newberg Community Hospital, gave to Voice of Calvary for its work in Jackson, Miss., to the Sports Ambassadors program and to OMS International for help with a youth center in Spain.

Students also showed their care and concern for their fellowman in contributing 425 pints of blood during the year, a new campus record. Since donation drives started 11 years ago students now have contributed 2,488 pints of blood to the American Red Cross program.

Several significant conferences had a religious theme during the year. Spiritual Life Week in October featured Dr. Robert Hess, formerly of Malone College. These evangelistic sessions did much to set the spiritual tone for the school year. The Missions Conference in January featured Bud Schaeffer, associate director of Sports Ambassadors, and 18 missionary representatives. The Staley Lecture series featured Dr. William Pannell of Fuller Theological Seminary as the spring Deeper Life Week speaker.

The religious life of the campus must never be taken for granted. It is not an additive to the curriculum but must be, and is, thoroughly integrated, providing a perspective and a point of reference to the entire learning and living enterprise.

In music and drama students brought inspiration and entertainment through a series of major events and small recitals. Fall term the 160-voice oratorio choir sang Vivaldi's Gloria accompanied by a community orchestra. The fall music theater production was My Fair Lady and the spring production was A Simple Gift, an original work by alumnus Tim Minikel. Theater productions included a night of one-act plays, a children's theater production of Alice in Wonderland and a performance of The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail. All of this was in addition to the regular performances by the 70-piece band, 54-voice choir, and the 25-piece orchestra.

Athletically, the Bruins gained prominence as the men's track team became the first independent school squad in more than 25 years to win the NAIA District 2 title—by an overwhelming margin. And the track women won their conference title. The men's basketball squad, for only the second time in nine years, failed to make the district playoffs, but the women improved on their previous season record.

On the administrative level, the Career Planning and Placement Center continues to counsel and work with current students and alumni and drew 40 to a "System for Identifying Motivated Abilities" (SIMA) workshop on campus. The financial aid program of the College continues to expand its base and during the year distributed, from all sources, more than $1 million in financial aid.

DEVELOPMENT / FINANCE:

Yesterday's dreams are becoming today's realities under God's direction as George Fox College continues its rapid physical growth. During the 1978-79 fiscal year the College completed two new buildings and began work on two other projects. The campus changes have been markedly evident with the College beginning its eighth building project in three years. The total investment will have been more than $6.5 million, with all projects (except revenue-producing residence halls), by college policy, paid for in advance through gifts and donations.

Opened in October was the Milo C. Ross Center, the new home for the music and religion divisions. This $1.5 million project renovated the former Hester Gymnasium and its 1½ floors and 18,000 square feet to a new complex of 24,000 square feet on 2½ floors. The center contains faculty offices, classrooms, practice rooms, rehearsal halls, specialty labs and music libraries. It is the first phase of a two-phase project that also is to include a new $2.5 million chapel / auditorium. Fund raising for this portion began in January with construction to start as soon as funds are obtained.

In January the College opened the new Television Center. The 1½-story building, funded through a grant from the M. J. Murdock Charitable Trust, contains 2,700 square feet and houses the College's new project to begin marketing nationwide educational videotape cassettes for playback on home television screens. The first project was completed in the fiscal year.

In October work started on a new athletic field complex to include a baseball field, hockey field, two softball diamonds and an archery range. The 10-acre site is located northeast of the main campus and required the removal and relocation of five homes. Work continued through the year, with first use of the complex scheduled in the 1979-80 school year.

In January construction started on an expansion of Heacock Commons. The project, costing $520,000, adds 7,500 square feet to the building, including a larger main eating area, new student lounge, dining room, snack bar / coffee shop, and conversation areas. Seating capacity was increased from 300 to 500 and the project reorients the building toward the new campus quad. First use of the expanded facility will be in the 1979-80 year.

Other changes in the campus included the removal of Fine Arts I and II structures, moved to the campus in 1948. That opened the way for the expansion of the dining commons and considerably improved the modern appearance of the central campus. The Alumni Lounge in Minthorn Hall was refurbished in a $7,500 project through an alumni gift, and the west facade of the Herbert Hoover Building was decorated with the placement of a large bronze profile sculpture of the former President, designed by a student and sculpted by a professor.

The College during the year also was given a $100,000 organ (with construction now underway) for the new chapel by Milo and Alice Ross; an $18,000 piano by a Newberg businessman; and received several major grants, including a $110,000 grant from the M. J. Murdock Charitable Trust, Vancouver, Wash.

In January the Development Department launched the United Chapel Appeal, a campaign within Northwest Yearly Meeting to raise $400,000 as the start of the total $2.5 million project for the new chapel / auditorium. The campaign is expected to continue into the 1980 year.

The Newberg community set a record level of giving to its Student Help Investment Program (Project SHIP) as businesses and corporations gave $27,960 to the drive. All funds are used for student employment opportunities on and off campus.

The physical growth at George Fox College is easy to depict and see. It's not as easy, however, to illustrate the growth in quality. But we believe the improvements in facilities merely mirror the improved quality of our academic program and the overall position of the College and its program.

While the new building has been evident, it has not been at the expense of current (or general) fund operations. The College again, for the eighth consecutive year, operated soundly in the black. Assets of the College climbed by more than $4 million to nearly $20 million during the fiscal year, with a fund balance of nearly $14 million.
