

Volume 60 | Issue 1

Article 60

4-2017

Fox's "A message from the great king: Reading Malachi in light of ancient Persian Royal Messenger texts from the time of Xerxes" (Book Review)

Gary R. Averill
Spiritual Life Bible College

The Christian Librarian is the official publication of the Association of Christian Librarians (ACL). To learn more about ACL and its products and services please visit <http://www.acl.org/>

Follow this and additional works at: <http://digitalcommons.georgefox.edu/tcl>

 Part of the Biblical Studies Commons

Recommended Citation

Averill, Gary R. (2017) "Fox's "A message from the great king: Reading Malachi in light of ancient Persian Royal Messenger texts from the time of Xerxes" (Book Review)," The Christian Librarian: Vol. 60 : Iss. 1 , Article 60.
Available at: <http://digitalcommons.georgefox.edu/tcl/vol60/iss1/60>

This Book Review is brought to you for free and open access by Digital Commons @ George Fox University. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Christian Librarian by an authorized editor of Digital Commons @ George Fox University. For more information, please contact arolf@georgefox.edu.

Fox, M. (2015). A message from the great king: Reading Malachi in light of ancient Persian Royal Messenger texts from the time of Xerxes. Winona Lake, IN: Eisenbrauns. 170 pp. $42.50. ISBN 9781575063948

This book has a laser fine focus. The audience of this book are those who are scholars in the area of Malachi. This is written much like a dissertation. He starts with the history of research on the book of Malachi. In the next chapter, the author discusses his methodology using Michael Ward's donegality. Fox gives an excellent overview of how this technique was used on the Narnia Series, and how he will use that technique. Next, the book discusses the history and the use of royal messengers. He then shows how these two areas influenced the writing of Malachi. Fox ends with a conclusion and what he believes should be future research. The book has no real literary flow and it is written specifically to scholars studying the book of Malachi. Due to purpose and audience of this book, I can only recommend this book to libraries that support graduate degree programs in the Old Testament.

Reviewer

Gary R. Averill, Spiritual Life Bible College

Wilson, T. (2016). More: Find your personal calling and live life to the fullest measure. Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan. 223 pp. $15.99. ISBN 9780310524250

With a foreword by Rick Warren, author of The Purpose Driven Life, it should come as no surprise that More addresses vocation and God's call. Todd Wilson, who left a job in engineering to start a nonprofit church planting organization, divides his book into two sections. In part one, he illustrates the ways calling involves both a mandate to everyone in the Church and a specific personal calling for each person. According to Wilson, the Church's calling is to "carry the fullness of Jesus into every corner of society" (p. 60), and an individual's calling should be fostered within a faith community and discerned through the Holy Spirit. Churches should be "incubators of calling" (p. 71). Wilson asks three fundamental questions: "Who am I created to BE?" "What am I created to DO?" and "Where am I created to GO?" The first question is related to each person's identity as one of God's children. The second question is related to Jesus' Great Commission: to make disciples. The third question is related to each individual's particular gifting and location in which the person can be the most effective. Many times, Wilson argues, the place a person can be most effective is where he or she already is (p. 95). Part two is a workbook of sorts that will help a person discern how she or he can answer these three questions in order to discern God's specific calling of her or his life in the context of the more general calling to make disciples. More can be used by an individual or in a small