Chapel/ Auditorium: A Week of Dedication

Formal ceremony,
October 15

George Fox College will dedicate its newest building, the William and Mary Bauman Chapel/Auditorium, in ceremonies October 15.

The formal program at 10:30 a.m. will be one of a dozen events set for a week-long dedication celebration starting October 11.

The new 1,200-seat auditorium, under construction for nearly a year, is the ninth new building on campus in the last five years.

The new $2.6 million facility with 23,500 square feet of floor space is the second phase of the Milo C. Ross Center. The first phase, a classroom office complex, opened in the fall of 1978. Overall, the $4 million Ross Center has some 48,000 square feet of floor space and has centered the College's Religion and Fine Arts Divisions in a new complex replacing three other facilities.

The new building, on the west side of the Ross Center, had its groundbreaking ceremonies July 30, 1981. Construction by the L. D. Mattson Company, Salem, Ore., began September 14. Completion by contractors is set for mid-September to allow the College time for final furnishings and to move in prior to the start of classes September 30.

Dedication events include several open houses for various College constituencies, a formal inaugural concert, reception and dinners, organ concert, and church services.

The first dedication week event is at 9:30 a.m. Monday (October 11)—the traditional Fall Convocation. Guest speaker will be John Dellenback, president of the national Christian College Coalition. The program is the formal welcome of students to the new school year by the College's faculty and administration.

Tuesday has been designated "Builder's Night," with all construction workers invited back to view the completed facility they helped construct. Wednesday's event is a 9:30 a.m. program featuring Oregon Poet Laureate William Stafford. Thursday, residents of Friendsview Manor, just across the street from the new auditorium, will be invited to an open house at 2:00 p.m. The night event is a "Sneak Preview" for the general community.

Friday is the main dedication day, starting with the morning dedication ceremonies, featuring college, church, city, county, and state officials. Ceremonies will honor the couple for whom the building is named. William Bauman has been a George Fox board member since 1969, for 10 years serving as chairman of the College's development committee. In 1974 he and his wife gave a $200,000 gift to the College designated for the project. Their gift was the inspiration to start a fund drive for the new building.

A noon luncheon for dedication guests and a formal dinner in the evening for donors and guests also are scheduled.

The Oregon Symphony Orchestra will give the inaugural concert in the auditorium, starting at 8:00 p.m. The program, part of the College's Lyceum Series, already is "sold out." A reception follows.

Saturday afternoon from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. the general public is invited to tour the building. Sunday events include a 2:00 to 4:00 p.m. open house for the College's church constituencies: Northwest Yearly Meeting, Evangelical Church of North America, and area churches. A 4:00 p.m. organ concert on the new $100,000 Balcom & Vaughan organ will feature George Fox music professor David Howard.

At 6:30 p.m. will be the first formal church service in the new chapel.

The new chapel-auditorium, equivalent to four stories in height, completes a longtime dream, first started in the 1950s by former President Milo Ross, then carried out by former President David LeShana.

It replaces Wood-Mar Auditorium, a third-floor facility in the College administration building completed in 1910. Wood-Mar Auditorium seats 420 and for years has not been used for large group gatherings because student enrollment and College employees now total nearly 900. It will remain, but with use limited.

A Program For the Older Adult

An Elderhostel program designed for older adult students will be established at George Fox College this fall.

The short-term, residential, educational program is offered at a modest cost to persons 60 years and older.

George Fox joins a national program and organization to host the Elderhostel courses. The program will be based at the College's Tilikum Retreat Center, seven miles northwest of the main Newberg campus.

The first program will be October 10-15, with a winter offering January 9-14 and a spring series May 8-13 and May 15-20.

George Fox becomes the second private institution in Oregon to offer the program during its regular academic year. Several Oregon schools offer summer programs. The Elderhostel program was started in 1975 with five colleges in New Hampshire. In 1982 the program had expanded to more than 500 colleges in all 50 states and Canada, serving nearly 38,000 summer hostellers. About 7,500 of those participated in the academic year program similar to that to be offered by George Fox.

The Elderhostel program brings small groups of about 30-40 persons to the campus. Liberal arts courses are specifically designed for the program and are offered on a noncredit basis with no homework or testing.

"The courses do not presuppose previous knowledge of the subject," according to the Elderhostel guidelines. Courses are taught by regular faculty members with the individual institutions emphasizing their own unique strengths and resources in offering programs they design.

Courses deliberately avoid age-specific focus on the problems of aging.

There are benefits to the colleges as well as the individual participants, according to Tilikum Director Gary Fawver, who will head the George Fox program.

The Elderhostel program uses the campus to its maximum, filling "holes" in facility scheduling. It also provides the College with opportunity for exposure on a national level, and it can substitute to older alumni in the place of alumni college events.

Also, the Elderhostel program provides faculty with stimulating, out-of-the-ordinary teaching assignments and helps familiarize them with working with older adults.

The program also demonstrates the College's concern for keeping older adults in the mainstream and its commitment to lifelong learning.

In the fall sessions George Fox will offer "Making Sense of Your Senses," taught by Fawver; "Peace and War," taught by history professor Ralph Beebe, and "Life Around a Pond," taught by biology professor Elver Voth.

The January courses are "New Games" by Fawver and Curt Ankeny of the Tilikum staff, "Contemporary Religious Thought" by religion professor Arthur Roberts, and "The Birth of Oregon" by the College's history professors. It will feature a videotape of the Champoeg Historical Pageant produced this summer.

In the spring the courses are "Christianity and the Outdoors" with Fawver, "Life Around the Pond," with Voth, and "Tell Me a Story," with Michael and Darlene Graves.

They won't be your typical college courses. "Making Sense of Your Senses," for example, will have participants pressing apple cider and listening to night sounds.

Tilikum, a 92-acre retreat center, features a 15-acre lake and has a two-story retreat house, multipurpose building and other facilities. Open-fire salmon bakes will be a specialty of the center.

The Elderhostel program combines the best traditions of education and hosteling, inspired by the youth hostels and folk schools of Europe. It is based on the belief that retirement does not mean withdrawal, but that the later years should be viewed as an opportunity to enter and enjoy new life experiences through intellectual stimulation and physical adventure.

David LeShana: Looking Back at 15 Years

When President David LeShana announced his resignation after 15 years at George Fox College, news media emphasized his leadership in campus physical enlargement—nine new buildings in five years and an increase in student enrollment of 75 percent in nine consecutive years of growth.

Those were the most visible—perhaps the most spectacular—signs of progress.

But LeShana, who September 1 becomes the sixth president of Seattle Pacific University, guided George Fox in his 13-year presidency to many other achievements.

Here is the list he supplied as among his choices to illustrate the growth in the overall strength of the College during his tenure.

ACADEMICS:

- Faculty growth from 25 to 44 full-time equivalent, now with nearly two thirds having earned doctorates.
- Establishment of faculty development programs and professional growth; curriculum expansion with elementary teacher education being developed; new teaching norms; new majors, including interdisciplinary studies; creation of the miniterm (September term) program.
- Joining of the national Christian College Consortium, with the strategic emphasis on the integration of faith/learning/living.
- Establishment of a variety of lectureships: Staley lectures, Christian Education Week, Quaker Heritage Week, Spring Theological Conference, the Hoover Symposium.

STUDENT LIFE:

- Acceptance and use of the "Confrontation Model" of discipline and operation.
- Growth of professionalism in the staff with student resident advisory training and master's degree requirements for full-time resident directors.
- Improved scholarship program, especially the continuing underwritten scholarships.
- The growth of enrollment from 358 to 745.

DEVELOPMENT:

- Stronger church ties and the creation of a full-time church relations director position.
- Stronger community relationships, including an annual community Project SHIP drive for student work funds, and community relations activities assigned to a staff member.

- Stronger alumni program with the role of the alumni board clarified and the creation of a full-time alumni director position.
- Stronger public relations and publications program with the creation of a full-time position (including sports information), and the establishment of the publication Life.
- Emphasis upon deferred giving with the development of trusts and annuities.
- Increased foundation support.

PROPERTY AND FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT:

- Eleven consecutive years of balanced budgets.
- Liquidation of all indebtedness for current operations.
- Growth from $2 million to $20 million in assets.
- Nine new buildings and the redesigned campus around a campus master plan.
- Acquisition of 90-acre Tilikum Retreat Center seven miles from the main campus.
- Growth of the endowment fund from $1 million to $4 million.
- Development of the long-range planning process, including the naming of a person to be in charge.

During the tenure of LeShana the College also received national exposure with its membership in the Christian College Consortium, the national Council of Independent Colleges, the Christian Holiness Association, the National Association of Evangelicals, and the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education.

New Alumni Officers

Gary Blackmar, a Portland stockbroker, will head the George Fox College Alumni Association for a second term.

Blackmar, a 1968 graduate, has been reelected president of the College's Alumni Board of Directors. He was first elected last summer to head the nearly 4,000-member association.

Blackmar previously was a high school and elementary school coach and counselor in Bend and Newberg, Ore. and in Idaho. He moved to Tualatin two years ago from Bend, where he was self-employed in market management and real estate.

Three new persons have been elected by mailed ballots to three-year terms on the George Fox Alumni Board.

New members are Marcille Comfort, a member of the Class of 1956; Brad Smith, a 1975 graduate, and Richard Zeller, a 1955 graduate.

Mrs. Comfort assists her husband, Marion, in a family-owned business, "Comfort's Ideal Cleaning," in Newberg.

She is a member of the Newberg Community Hospital Auxiliary and recording secretary of the Newberg Business and Professional Women's Club.

Smith is campus supervisor, head women's basketball coach and assistant coach in football at Oregon City (Ore.) High School. He currently is secretary for the Oregon High School Girls' Basketball Association.

Zeller is a health teacher for Rowe Junior High in Milwaukie. He has been a schoolteacher for 27 years. He heads the Zeller Family Singers, which tours the nation to support the Child Care Program for World Vision, Inc.

Reelected as secretary for the association is Gertrude Ankeny, treasurer/secretary for Twin Rocks Friends Camp in Rockaway, Ore. She is a 1950 GFC graduate.

The 10-member alumni board meets five times a year on campus and serves as an advisory board to George Fox Alumni Director Dave Adrian.

1982 CLASS GIFT: A NEW PULPIT FOR THE NEW AUDITORIUM

A custom-built wood pulpit for the new William and Mary Bauman Chapel/Auditorium under construction is the class gift of 1982 George Fox College graduates.

The 136-member senior class has contributed $1,150 for the construction of a large pulpit still in the design stages. The pulpit is planned to be constructed by a local craftsman, sketches to be submitted to the College for approval and acceptance. Plans are to include a built-in microphone stand, lighting and clock.

The class has asked that the pulpit be given in honor of religion professor Cyril Carr, who died at the age of 32 just five days before the class graduated. He was a 1971 George Fox graduate and on the faculty for three years. A plaque is to be placed on the pulpit.

The class also has given $500 for a seat in the new 23,500-square-foot building. The pledge is part of a campaign to complete the building by "selling" the seats to donors at $500 each. More than $250,000 was raised through the plan.

A Moving Situation

George Fox College's historical museum is going to get a new home—one more accessible to the public.

Construction is underway for a new location in Brougher Hall on campus, across the street from the College's new William and Mary Bauman Auditorium, also under construction.

The museum will be moved from its present location in the lower level of Shambaugh Library.

The move will allow further expansion of library holdings with the present museum space to be used for additional shelving.

By relocating the museum, it will be more available without using a flight of stairs as now required in the library building. The ground-level museum in the north wing of Brougher Hall will have access directly from East North Street and also from the new 200-space chapel/ auditorium parking area.

The change is expected to be made in time for the opening of classes fall term, September 30.

The move will cause several other changes. The new museum area currently is being used partly by the College's physical plant for storage and partly by the College's art department.

Remodeling now underway will open the two adjacent rooms to one larger area with office space. To accommodate the art department several walls are being altered elsewhere in the building and other changes made to move Art Professor Pete Snow's office. One larger classroom has been created from two smaller rooms.

College physical plant staff members are carrying out the remodeling in Brougher Hall, erected in 1947, enlarged in 1959 and again in 1961. The museum will be in the newest addition.

With the moving of the art department and its expansion into another area, the student radio station, KGFC, is being relocated from Brougher Hall to the College's Student Union Building. It will be in the student communications center adjacent to the yearbook and newspaper staff offices.

The museum was opened to the public in August of 1980, the result of more than two years of preparation by museum curator John Brougher. The building to which the museum is being moved is named in his honor after a gift for the building. He is an honorary George Fox board member after 30 years as an active member. He retired from medical practice in 1980 after more than 50 years in Vancouver, Wash. He and his wife then moved to Newberg.

Although a museum of sorts had been on campus for years, the current one is the first time displays were organized, items catalogued, and policies for acquisitions and operation established.

The museum, without admission charge, specializes in local area pioneer and Quaker materials. More than some museums, the George Fox display offers a "hands-on" experience, with many items not behind glass or lock.

Described in the annual "Mobil Travel Guide" as a place for vacationers to stop, the museum has a country store setting, living room, dining room, and a variety of separate display cases.

Elementary Education: Success Before it Starts

George Fox College's new elementary education program may be even more successful than first anticipated.

Teacher Education Director Herman Hughes says enrollment estimates first made when the new teaching major was announced 18 months ago are now being revised upward. "And it's still growing," he says.

Meantime, progress in development of the program continues with the announcement of the selection of Dr. Edythe P. Leupp to be the new professor of elementary education. She will join the education faculty winter term.

The Oregon Education Coordination Commission (OECC) granted permission for the elementary education teaching major in 1980, a major step in a long-range program that will not be totally completed until June 1984 with the anticipated first graduating class in elementary education.

Hughes reports that the first class of graduates in the new major will be juniors next fall and 25 persons already are participating. "We're seeing a trend beginning with more freshmen declaring [for an education major] and a greater influx of current students on campus," Hughes says.

Under the current program to be phased out, students attend George Fox for their first three years, then spend a fourth year at Western Oregon State College, receiving a bachelor of science degree from George Fox and are recommended for certification by WOSC. The program has been in existence for 27 years, and George Fox has averaged 8.5 students annually in the joint-degree program to be terminated after this year's senior class.

Dr. Leupp will add years of experience to the GFC program. She will leave a position as principal of Creston Elementary School in Portland. She has been a school administrator in Portland public schools for 15 years. Previously for six years she was director of elementary education at Northwest Nazarene College, Nampa, Idaho. An Oregon and Idaho elementary and secondary teacher for 14 years, she also taught previously at the University of Idaho, Cascade College, and at the University of Oregon for six years. She has a doctoral degree in education from the University of Oregon, received in 1972.

Dr. Leupp is noted statewide in Oregon. Last year she was state chairman for the Confederation of Oregon School Administrators annual convention. In 1978 she was state chairman for the Oregon Association of Elementary School Principals.

In addition to Dr. Leupp, another full-time equivalent teacher in elementary education, utilizing local public school personnel on a part-time basis, will be needed in the 1983-84 school year.

In the process of creating the new major, Hughes says the College "will continue to upgrade both the program and the students with new and more stringent screening of basic skills."

The timetable calls for further development of the elementary curriculum program in 1982-83, the written program to be submitted to the Teacher Standards and Practices Commission by April 1983, and a visit by the commission in the spring of the following year, just ahead of the first graduating class.

Hughes is quick to point out, however, the program is not absolutely endorsed at this time. "There are no guarantees from the TSPC—you're never 100 percent certain—but barring some unforeseen circumstances, I believe we will be totally approved," he says.

Hughes says he believes George Fox has a distinctive of personalized attention for each student because of the size of the student body and the favorable student-teacher ratio. He said that is one of the reasons for the strong interest in George Fox as a teacher education school.

1982-83 Lyceum Series

The Oregon Symphony Orchestra will open the third annual Chehalem Valley Lyceum Series, giving the premier performance in George Fox College's new William and Mary Bauman Chapel/Auditorium now under construction.

A grant of $11,000 from the Times-Mirror Corporation of Los Angeles (the owner of Publishers Paper Company in Newberg) has been received to bring the Portland-based Oregon Symphony to Newberg for the inaugural concert October 15.

The orchestra, directed by James DePriest, will head a list of eight events in the 1982-83 Lyceum Series.

All events will start at 8:00 p.m. in the new 1,200-seat auditorium.

The community-oriented fine arts series is sponsored by George Fox to bring a variety of cultural events to the mid-Willamette Valley area. The series is a renewal of a Lyceum program by the College in its early decades. It has been funded in part in the first three years through grants of the Oregon Arts Commission.

"We feel it is imperative the citizens of our region have the opportunity to experience and enjoy the very finest artists in the performing arts," says Lyceum Series Chairman Neil Roth, a member of the George Fox psychology faculty and an accomplished cellist.

The 1982-83 series will include:

Nov. 22—The Western Opera Theater performing Rigoletto. The Verdi opera will be sung in English by the touring band of the San Francisco Opera.

Jan. 6—Violinist Michael Foxman.

Feb. 7—Organist Ovid Young performing on the new Bauman Auditorium Balcom & Vaughan pipe organ.

Feb. 21—The Chehalem Symphony Orchestra, directed by Dennis Hagen. The Newberg/GFC community orchestra will be joined by string sections from Linfield College and Pacific University.

Mar. 28—Internationally known soprano Grace De La Cruz.

April 18—A second performance by the Chehalem Symphony, featuring Roger Wilhite, former Newberg resident, 1978 GFC grad, and now Reno entertainer, performing the Liszt E Flat Major Piano Concerto.

May 16—Tap Root Theater Company, performing the play Pilgrim, a story by John Bunyan.

Steady at The Helm

Robert G. Monroe, president of Smith & Monroe & Gray Engineers, Inc., Beaverton, has been reelected chairman of the board of George Fox College.

Monroe, a Portland resident, has been a board member since 1973 and will serve his fourth term as chairman. He has been president of the engineering firm since 1971.

Monroe will serve in his college leadership position while the 90-year-old Newberg school searches for its 10th president with a nationwide search now in progress.

There will be just two changes on the board's executive committee, which acts for the board between its semiannual May and December sessions.

Newberg physician Stanley Kern has requested to step down as chairman of the academic affairs committee of the board, one of four committees. The new chairman is David Myton, coordinator of teacher education, Oregon Teacher Standards and Practices Commission and a Newberg resident. He becomes a member of the executive committee as committee chairman but already has been serving as an at-large member. The new at-large member is Don McNichols, a retired professor of Seattle Pacific University and now chairman of the George Fox presidential search committee.

For the first time in years no new members are being added to the College's board.

Northwest Yearly Meeting of Friends Church, meeting on the College's campus, has approved the renomination of 14 persons to the 42-member board.

With three-year terms, a third of the board is elected each year. George Fox alumni nominate six board members, current board members 18 and Northwest Yearly Meeting itself, which must confirm all appointments, 18.

All groups in their various procedures reelected the same representatives. Alumni have reelected Gordon Crisman, assistant vice-president and branch manager for the Benj. Franklin Savings and Loan, Salem, and a 1969 graduate; and Roger Minthorne, president of the Roger M. Minthorne Co., a manufacturer's representative in Lake Oswego. He is a 1947 graduate.

The church organization has renamed Monroe, J. D. Baker, copartner of Baker-Lovlyn Inc. Construction and Real Estate, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; Gerald Dillon, pastor, Vancouver, Wash., Friends Church; Claude Lewis, Central Point, Ore., dentist; Dwight Macy, a Culver, Ore., rancher; and Myton.

The board has reelected Hal Adrian, assistant vice-president for personnel, North Pacific Insurance Co., Portland; LeRoy Benham, president of Climax Manufacturing Co., Newberg, and president of the Newberg Area Chamber of Commerce; Sam Farmer, national sales manager, Custom Foods Products, Inc., Chicago; C. W. (Bill) Field, business manager, National Gas, Sunnyside Wash.; Walter Wilhite, executive director, Friends Fund, based in Newberg; and McNichols.

Chapel Dedication

The new auditorium, with seats for 800 on the main floor and a balcony for 400, has a full stage, dressing rooms, preparation rooms, greenroom, orchestra pit, lobby, ticket and coat booths, and art gallery. Large stained-glass memorial windows are featured in front.

A three-year intensive campaign raised the necessary funds for the building's construction. Included was a "Buy-A-Seat" campaign in which chapel seats were "sold" at $500 each, with more than $250,000 raised.

Another $400,000 was pledged by churches of Northwest Yearly Meeting.

The largest single grant was $400,000 from the Collins Foundation of Portland, with another $100,000 from Publishers Paper Company. Two Newberg area couples each pledged more than $100,000.

The final $150,000 was given by the Kresge Foundation as a challenge grant when the other funds were raised by a February 15 deadline.

The Bauman name for the new building is recognized in the Northwest. He was a president and owner of Bauman Lumber Company, Lebanon, Oregon, from 1946 to 1973, when it was sold to Willamette Industries. He now is a private investor.

Bauman is a member of the Board of Trustees of Western Evangelical Seminary, Portland, serving as chairman for nine years, ending in 1980. He has been active in the Evangelical Church of North America as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Pacific Conference, serving for 12 years as chairman until 1980.

Mrs. Bauman has been a decorator of the Sweet Home Evangelical Church, where the couple has attended for 12 years. She is an amateur artist (oil paintings), has been active in the Lebanon Fine Arts Center, and is a pianist.
