What a Party!

George Fox College turned 100 years old during a three-day celebration that drew accolades from those who participated in the Centennial events.

The weekend's success went beyond the wildest dreams of members of the Centennial Committee, who were hoping for a crowd of 2,000 people for the Sunday afternoon Centennial Fair. Instead, they were stunned to learn that more than 3,500 had been served the free picnic lunch that opened the fair's activities.

The Sept. 7-9 celebration featured something for everyone, from a Saturday evening birthday party for Newberg-area alumni and friends to the lectures by nationally known visiting scholars on Monday to the fireworks that lit up the sky over the campus at the conclusion of the Centennial celebration.

President Edward F. Stevens compared Saturday's event to a party for the immediate family and Sunday's community fair to opening up the party to the extended family. "I thought the Centennial Fair was terrific for cementing our relationship with the city of Newberg and this general surrounding area," he said. "I saw a lot of people there I'd never seen on campus before."

Leonard Attrell of Newberg echoed President Stevens' view. "I just thought it was really a wonderful event for not only the College but also for the community," he said. "Everybody was in a happy, festive mood, and there was a lot of visiting going

Bill Field of Sunnyside, Wash., a 1952 GFC graduate and Board of Trustees member, was among those alumni who made the trip back for their alma mater's birthday.

"It was exciting to see the great number of people that were there. Everybody seemed to be enjoying themselves," he said. "They seemed to have something that appealed to everybody. I got pictures of my grandkids around the antique cars, and my wife spent a lot of time around the quilts."

"I thought it was outstanding," Marie Macy of Metolius, Ore., said. "In all of (See "Celebration" on page 4.)

Graduate Program to Expand with Education Degree

George Fox College, which took its first step into graduate-level programs a year ago, is expanding its graduate studies into the field of education.

Beginning in June 1992, GFC will offer a Master of Arts in Teaching degree. The non-thesis, 11-month program is for individuals who have completed an undergraduate degree in a field other than education.

George Fox College President Edward F. Stevens announced the new program, which is expected to enroll about 30 to 60 students the first year.

The College's first graduate program, offering a doctorate in clinical psychology, started with 73 students and has 85 enrolled this fall, helping push total college enrollment to a record 1,222 students in GFC's 101st year.

Graduates of the new program will be eligible for Oregon Basic Teaching Certificate approval and will have satisfied all academic conditions for the Standard Teaching Certificate. The M.A.T. degree will be available in advanced mathematics, biology, chemistry, elementary education, health education, home economics, language arts, music, physical education, and social studies.

Initial classes will be held on the Newberg campus and offered on the cohort plan, with groups progressing through the program as a class unit.

The graduate program was approved by the George Fox Board of Trustees in February after an on-campus preparation process that began in 1986, Stevens said. The program was approved by the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges accrediting agency in June, and final approval is pending by the Oregon Teacher Standards and Practices Commission (TSPC).

George Fox will be one of five private colleges in Oregon to offer the fifth-year program. The College will place students in schools in Newberg, Sherwood, Dayton, St. Paul, and West Linn for field experience.

GFC will spend about $60,000 in the next three years to expand library holdings in the education field, Stevens said. Existing

Enrollment Sets Another Record

After a record-setting year in 1990, enrollment at George Fox College has grown another 14 percent to 1,222 students for the fall of 1991.

The increase marks the fifth consecutive year of enrollment growth for GFC, which has doubled in size in the last five years: from 549 students in 1986 to 706 in 1987, 820 in 1988, 945 in 1989, and 1,073 in 1990.

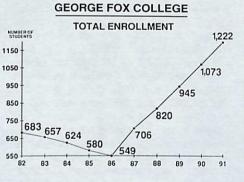

For the first time in its history, George Fox College has more than 1,000 students attending classes on its campus.

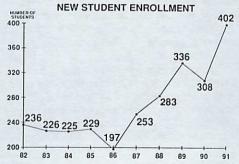

On-campus undergraduate enrollment is at 922 students this fall. The number of new students has increased by 34 percent over last year, with 264 first-time freshmen and 123 transfer students attending classes at George Fox College.

There are also 85 students in the College's graduate school of clinical psychology, a 16 percent increase over 1990. When transferred from Western Conservative Baptist Seminary last fall, the program had 73 students.

Another 215 students are enrolled in GFC's degree-completion program in management of human resources. Now in its fifth year, the program offers working adults classes in Portland, Salem, and Eugene.

"We continue to be grateful to God for the tremendous growth," President Edward F. Stevens said of the 1991 enrollment figures. "The quality as well as the quantity of students is increasing also. Growth presents some problems, but we welcome them as opportunities for the Kingdom of God."

Fifteen Begin New Terms on GFC's Board of Trustees Rotary; vice president and incoming

An Arkansas resident joins members from Oregon, Washington, and Idaho who are starting new terms on George Fox College's Board of Trustees.

All were approved by Northwest Yearly Meeting of Friends Church at its annual session in July on the College's campus.

Newly named to the board are Peggy Fowler of Portland, Joe Gerick of Boise, Idaho, and P. Steven Harmon of Camano Island, Wash. Fowler, a 1973 graduate of George Fox College, is vice president of power production for Portland General Electric Company. A member of Newberg Friends Church, she also serves on the board of directors for the Portland YWCA.

Gerick is the new general superintendent of Northwest Yearly Meeting of Friends Church. Currently living in Boise, he assumes the position full time in January. His background is in management and engineering, having worked as a department manager for CH2M Hill in Boise.

manager for CHZM Fill in Botal A graduate of the University of Idaho, where he earned both bachelor's and master's degrees, Gerick has been active in Northwest Yearly Meeting, chairing the Board of Evangelism and serving on the Board of Missions. At the Boise Friends Church, he has been a Sunday school teacher and elder and has filled in as preacher. He also has participated in a short-term missions project with the Get Away, Give Away program in Mexico.

Away, Give Away program in Manager Harmon, a 1982 George Fox College graduate, is president and manager of financial services for Harmon & Associates in Stanwood, Wash. Other leadership roles he holds include vice president and incoming president for 1992-93 of the Mount Vernon Rotary; vice president and incoming president for 1992-93 of the Skagit Valley Hospital Foundation; chairman of the Stanwood High School Vocational Advisory Committee; and member of the board of trustees for Camp Harmony. He attends Camano Chapel, where he is chairman of the board, a deacon, and the worship music leader.

Fowler, Gerick, and Harmon join 12 others who have been renamed to the board: Hal Adrian and Robert Monroe of Portland; Gordon Crisman of Tualatin, Ore.; C. W. Field Jr. of Sunnyside, Wash.; Doro. thy Roberts of Boise, Idaho; Donald Lamm of Greenleaf, Idaho; John Lemmons of Kelso, Wash.; Dwight Macy of Culver, Ore.; Jack Meadows of Fayetteville, Ark.; Roger Minthorne of Lake Oswego, Ore.; Bill Sims of Hayden Lake, Idaho; and William Wilson of Longview, Wash.

PRESIDENT'S PEN

BIGGER IS BETTER! That is what many would call the American theme song.

BIGGER IS BADDER! (As in bad, badder, baddest??) This is what I am hearing from some folks who are concerned with the growth of the College.

Really, we should reject both notions as inaccurate generalizations that have nothing to do with George Fox College. I believe we have shown a degree of excellence that has allowed us to grow. It also seems to me that our growth is good in most respects, but let's reason together about the causes and the cautions of increased enrollment.

Obviously, several of our program additions have contributed to the growth, and that is positive because it means two things: (1) that we have extended our mission/ministry/purpose to a greater number of persons, and (2) that we have added strength, breadth, and depth to our education.

A listing of the program additions in the last seven or eight years includes Juniors Abroad, an international studies major, the English Language Institute, and other "Internationalizing the Curriculum" programs; new majors in elementary education (with 122 students this fall), Management of Human Resources (MHR)-also called the degree-completion program for working adults (with 216 enrolled), engineering (a 3-2 cooperative program with other colleges), and computer information science; graduate programs in clinical psychology (with 85 students), teacher education, management, and Christian studies-the latter three to begin in 1992.

The fall of 1991 has brought the exciting "Computers Across the Curriculum" program to campus. This follows the "Writing," "Ethics," and "Internationalizing" the curriculum emphases.

Some of the other good features to come from the growth certainly include the increases in salaries for faculty and staff. Enrollment growth has allowed the College to improve salaries by 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11 percent in the last five years. This is in comparison to tuition increases of 5, 5.2, 7, 7.8, and 8.3 percent in the same five years (1987-91).

The salary increases were needed just to bring our employees to a comparable level with other colleges and to give them a "living wage." Our people serve because they are "called," but we should still invest in them when finances allow because our employees are our most valuable resource.

Certainly there are cautions to growth. One concern expressed to me often is the potential "loss of mission/purpose." Do not fear!! We know who we are and "Whose" we are at George Fox College. There is no intention of being anything but unashamedly Christ-centered. We also will continue to educate every student broadly—to live and to lead—not just to make a living. It is called a liberal arts education.

Often people will cite the names of schools that "lost the Faith," and it is implied that this happened because they became larger. I will respond with the names of Messiah, Wheaton, and other colleges that have grown but "kept the Faith."

Another concern is that with growth we will lose our marvelous sense of "community." This, I believe, is a possibility if we do not work at maintaining community. It is possible to grow and still keep the small school/friendly atmosphere.

We are committed to a 16:1 student/faculty ratio. The Student Life staff works hard at small group Bible study and community building in the residence halls. In 1988 the administration decided to limit the number of MHR classes because we believe we can give personal service and attention to about 200 students in that program. Chapel is filling the balcony of Bauman Auditorium, but it is possible to go back to three meetings per week (as in the past when Wood-Mar Auditorium filled up) if necessary. There is no doubt, however, that we will need to work to maintain the sense of community.

How large do we want to be? The Board of Trustees adopted a goal (not a limit) of 1,200 to 1,250 undergraduate (on-campus) students in the 1983 Century One Planning Commission (COPCO) report. If we continue to attract about 400 freshmen and transfers per year and our retention continues to improve, we should reach that number by 1994 or 1995. With graduate students and MHR, we would be at about 1,700 total students.

But only the Heavenly Father knows for sure, so we will just keep on doing our best so that ... His kingdom come, His will be done, on earth as it is in Heaven ... at least as it relates to the Kingdom work here at George Fox College.

Beebe Hall Dedicated

George Fox College's newest building, the Richard H. Beebe Residence Hall, was dedicated on Saturday, Sept. 28, one day less than a year from groundbreaking.

Members of the Beebe family joined with the GFC Board of Trustees and college administrators in the brief program.

The three-story building is located on the west side of the Hess Creek Canyon greenway, near Carlton Way. It houses 40 students in 10 two-room suites. The 9,000-square-foot minidorm building also contains a student post office to serve east campus residence halls.

The new building completes a plan for three similar new-format residence units. Carey Hall was completed in 1980 and Willcuts Hall last year.

Construction cost was about $700,000, with the College serving as its own contractor and using specialized subcontractors.

Beebe was superintendent of the Crow-Applegate-Lorane School District near Eugene, Ore., when he died of cardiac arrest in September 1989 at the age of 60. He was named superintendent of the district in 1980 after serving for 20 years as its principal.

At the time of his death, Beebe was chairman of the Student Life Committee of the College's Board of Trustees. A 1951 GFC graduate and the College's Alumnus of the Year in 1985, he had been a board member for 15 years.

Beebe was one of the founders of the Eugene Friends Church. He served Northwest Yearly Meeting of Friends for 16 years as its presiding clerk, the denomination's highest lay leader position.

Naming of the building in his honor was approved by the College's Board of Trustees, which broke into its fall meeting for the dedication program.

Beebe's wife, Norma, and four children and their families were present for the program, which was followed by an open house.

The new building helps the College keep up with a growing enrollment that has doubled in the last five years. Beebe Hall and the acquisition this summer of two nearby residences gives the College housing for 703 students. Beebe Hall is the 17th residence unit on the college campus.

Homer Wright Named Volunteer of the Year

On many sidewalks, steps, and projects on the George Fox College campus are the initials "VOW," for "Volunteers on Wheels." There well could be another set of initials: "HW."

Those initials stand for Homer Wright, 76, George Fox College's 1991 Volunteer of the Year.

Volunteers on Wheels is a group of retired members of Northwest Yearly Meeting of Friends Church who spend their summers traveling throughout Oregon, Washington, and Idaho, doing volunteer construction work for the church and its various ministries.

Every year since 1985, Volunteers on Wheels has spent two to three weeks on the George Fox College campus, helping in a variety of construction projects. Each year, Wright has been the project director, helping not only during the weeks the VOW members are on campus, but also weeks ahead in the planning and preparation.

In all, under Wright's direction the VOW workers have contributed about $30,000 in services, based on prices at the time of project completion.

The projects have included sidewalks on Meridian and Sheridan streets; steps on the east and west sides of Hess Creek Canyon near student residence housing; steps at the Wheeler Sports Center parking lot; slabs and foundations for the baseball dugouts and batting cages of the Morse Athletic Fields; and just recently, the concrete work, both internal and external, for the new President's/Development Offices.

In addition to these projects, Wright also has been available for consultation. During the school year, GFC's Director of Plant Services Clyde Thomas often calls Wright seeking advice. "The next thing you know, he's down here setting up the forms," Thomas said.

/ish vou were here!"

Remember when a friend or relative sent you a postcard (usually from an exotic place like Hawaii, Paris, or New Zealand) with that message? Well, it accurately reflects my sentiments for every one of our supporters and friends during the Centennial Celebration on Sept. 7, 8, and 9.

Sept. 7, after celebrating with area birthday parties throughout the West during our centennial year, we concluded back home on campus. An evening program featured performances by alumni joining with the band and choir, and by our touring vocal group, Dayspring. Cake and punch were served to our Newberg-area alumni and friends.

Sept. 8 found some of us at worship at Newberg Friends Church, where Pacific Friends Academy was started in 1885. I spoke in three meetings for worship—that is a challenge for a nonpreacher president (not to mention the challenge for those in worship). Then we moved to campus for an afternoon Centennial Community Fair. We were surprised and overjoyed when more than 3,500 joined us for a picnic, oldfashioned games and exhibits, cutting of the official birthday cake, and a Four Flats Quartet reunion concert, all on the campus quadrangle, which had been decorated with bunting, banners, and balloons.

Sept. 9 (the actual birthday of our founding), we hosted four nationally recognized scholars for a series of lectures as classes were dismissed for the day. A fifth scholar spoke in our morning Centennial Convocation. The three-day celebration ended Monday night with a Centennial/President's Council Dinner, followed by a candlelight ceremony around the Centennial Tower. As we placed a plaque on the time capsule, fireworks exploded overhead, bringing the yearlong Centennial observance to a close.

After the candlelight service, when Linda and I were driving home, I asked, "Well, on a 1-to-10 scale, how was the celebration?" Linda responded, "It was a 12!"

So yes, we "wish you were here"!

Also, it would have been great to have you here for the arrival of 402 new students, who moved our total number to 1,222. Both are records.

And it would be delightful to have you in Chapel with our new campus pastor, Gregg Lamm, experiencing the spirit of worship and the sense of celebration of God's love and joy.

I "wish you were here" to see nearly 700 students pick up their own Apple Macintosh computers as we began the Computers Across the Curriculum program.

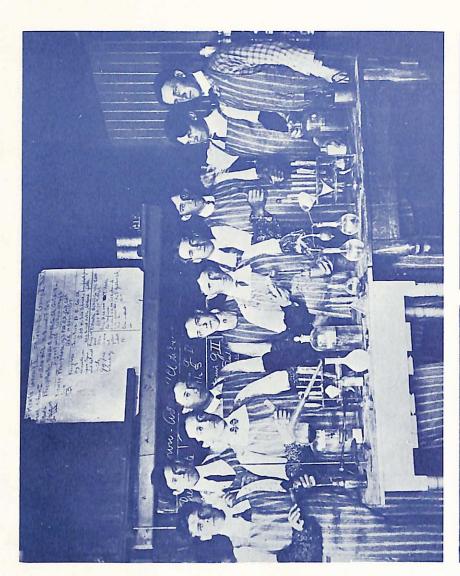

In all, it has been, is, and will be an exciting year. It is possible because "... God is supplying all our needs, according to His riches in Christ Jesus..." and He is doing it through you!

THANKS—for your gifts—for your prayers—for encouraging young people to attend—for your time and efforts on our behalf!!

THANKS!

FACULTY NEWS

Ten Join George Fox College Faculty

Ten new full-time faculty members have joined George Fox College with the start of the 1991-92 school year.

Mark Ankeny is the College's new assistant professor in its Management of Human Resources program. A 1975 graduate of GFC, he attended the University of Oregon and received a master's degree in educational administration from Portland State University. An adjunct faculty member for the MHR program for the past two years, he previously taught fifth and sixth grades for Yamhill Grade School District #16.

Janice Cammack is GFC's new associate professor of chemistry. A 1980 graduate of George Fox College, Cammack earned her Ph.D. in organic chemistry from Oregon State University. She then taught at Augustana College in Sioux Falls, S.D., at Wheaton College in Wheaton, Ill., and at Pacific College in Forest Grove, Ore., before returning to her alma mater.

Clark Campbell, GFC's new assistant professor of psychology, is a graduate of Wheaton College who earned both an M.A. and Ph.D. in clinical psychology from Western Baptist Seminary in Portland, Ore. He was a clinical psychologist at Dammasch State Hospital in Wilsonville, Ore., for two years, and since 1984, he has been in private practice.

Eugene Dykema is professor of business with half-time responsibility in administration. A member of the Economic and Business Department of Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Mich., since 1973, he served as the department's chairman for the past six years. He has a business background as a senior associate with Technomic Research Associates, where he was a management consultant to Fortune 500 companies and government agencies. Dykema earned an M.B.A. from the University of Chicago and Ph.D. in economics from the University of Notre Dame

Michelle Dykstra is GFC's new instructor of psychology. She comes to GFC from Fuller Theological Seminary's School of Psychology in Pasadena, Calif., where she earned her master's degree in psychology and is currently at the dissertation stage of her doctorate. In addition to serving as a teaching assistant at Fuller, she completed an internship with the seminary's Psychological Center. Other experience includes a pre-internship with Pasadena Community Counseling Center and practicums with Catholic Social Services and The Church Network

Anne Frohlich is GFC's new head of technical services for the Murdock Learning Resource Center. A graduate of the University of Denver, she received a master of religious education degree from Fuller Theological Seminary and a master of arts in library science degree from Rosary College in River Forest, Ill. Frohlich brings to GFC 18 years of experience, having previously worked for William Tyndale College in Farmington Hills, Mich., and Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Philadelphia, Pa.

Dennis Ingolfsland is also new to the Murdock Learning Resource Center as its reference librarian. He comes to GFC from Arizona College of the Bible in Phoenix, where he was the library director. He also worked as a library assistant at the Daniel Boone Regional Library in Columbia, Mo., and at Calvary Bible College in Kansas City, Mo. He holds master's degrees in library science from the University of Missouri and theological studies from Fuller Theological Seminary.

Larry Kading is the new director of GFC's Video Communication Center. He earned his bachelor of arts degree from George Fox College in 1987 as the Communication Department's "Graduate of the Year." In the years since his graduation, he was a videographer for Princess Cruise Lines based in Santa Monica, Calif., and the videotape engineer for KFTY Channel 50 in Santa Rosa, Calif.

Glenn Moran returns to George Fox College as professor of education and chairman of the Division of Teacher Education. From 1979 to 1986, he was an associate professor of education at GFC, the final year also serving as the director of teacher education. He left George Fox to become principal for the West Linn (Ore.) School District's Wilsonville Primary School, and since 1990 he had served as the district's personnel director. His educational background includes a bachelor of science degree from Colorado State University, a master of arts degree from the University of Colorado, and a doctor of education degree from the University of Northern Susan Shaw is GFC's new assistant professor of Christian ministries. Originally from Georgia, she comes to GFC from California Baptist College in Riverside, where she was an assistant professor of religion since 1987, and Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in Brea, Calif., where she was an adjunct professor of religious education. Shaw did her undergraduate work at Berry College in Rome, Ga., and earned both an M.A. and Ed.D. in Christian education from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky.

Bufford Elected To Leadership Of Association

Rodger K. Bufford, Ph.D., professor of psychology and director of the Graduate School of Clinical Psychology at George Fox College, has been named president elect of the western regional division of the Christian Association for Psychological Studies (CAPS).

The announcement was made at the association's annual convention, held in Anaheim, Calif., in June. The three-year term involves serving as president elect of CAPS West during 1991-92, as president in 1992-93, and as past president in 1993-94.

Also during the convention, Bufford presented a paper on "Spiritual Wellbeing and Interpersonal Behavior" and chaired a discussion session on "Integration: State of the Art for the '90s."

Bufford has headed the clinical psychology program since 1982. He practices as a clinical psychologist at Western Psychological and Counseling Services Center in Tualatin, Ore., and is a member of the Allied Health Care staff at Portland Adventist Medical Center.

Previously, he taught in the Psychological Studies Institute/Georgia State University, chaired the psychology department at Huntington College in Huntington, Ind., and taught at American University in Washington, DC

He holds both a master's and a doctoral degree in clinical psychology from the University of Illinois.

George Fox College Professor Used as Expert During Gulf War

Ralph Beebe's "Blessed Are the Peacemakers" has been named "Book of the Year" by Choice Books, an international book distributor. Beebe, George Fox College professor of history, will travel to Kansas in November to receive the award.

"Blessed Are the Peacemakers" was originally published by Zondervan Publishing House in August 1990 and is being republished in England by Eagle Publishers. It tells the life story of a Christian Palestinian named Audeh Rantisi.

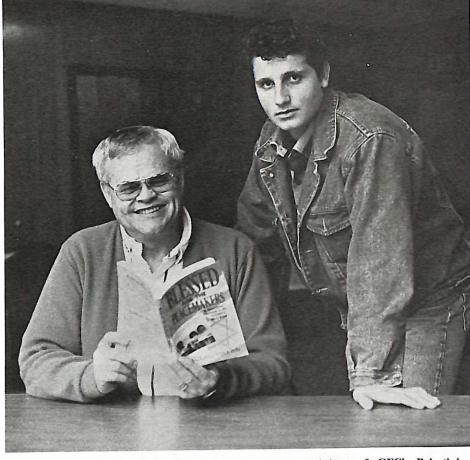

As a result of his latest book—along with regular travels to the Holy Land and extensive study of the people there—Beebe has become recognized as an expert on the Israeli-Palestinian issue. That expertise led to regular interviews by the media during the Persian Gulf War.

Interest in Beebe began with talk-show hosts, who were responding to a promotional piece about his book. Then the war broke out, and Beebe found himself interviewed 50 times on radio and four times on television concerning Arab/Israeli relations.

All but four of the interviews were performed by phone hook-up. A 45-minute instudio radio interview at KKEY in Portland and a six-minute interview on AM Northwest were among Beebe's local appearances. He also traveled to Chicago and Florida to conduct television interviews on the Christian Television Network and others.

Beebe says his most interesting interview occurred an hour after the war started and before President Bush addressed the nation. Station KKLA out of Los Angeles, Calif., called him to conduct a 10-minute interview with Admiral Eugene Carroll in Washington, D.C. Beebe said both their opinions were "very cautious" concerning the war.

Many of the interviews also included an opportunity for listeners to call in and ask Beebe various questions or express an opinion about his views. Some of the callers were extremely hostile, according to Beebe. "One person felt that I, by even suggesting that the Palestinians had any rights to a homeland, was totally un-Christian," he said. "The feeling that the Jews had no moral responsibility to the Palestinians because they are God's chosen people" was a typical point of view, Beebe said.

At a time when Americans were ultrapatriotic and gung-ho about the war, Beebe's Palestinian sympathies were not welcomed by many people. Beebe said he answered their hostile questions by saying, "Clearly in the Old Testament Israel is God's chosen nation, but it is still subject to obedience. Really, the Old Testament suggests that any nation that supports Israel without any reservation whatsoever could very well be in jeopardy in the eyes of God."

In giving his reasons for writing the books and doing the interviews, Beebe said, "I want people to sympathize with the Palestinians. I also don't want them to lose their sympathy for Jews. We need to have balance in our sympathies.

"I do support the Palestinian cause today, but I also support Israel and so do most Palestinians. They just want to have a homeland of their own," he explained.

HRM Becomes MHR

After five successful years pioneering the way in Oregon, George Fox College's program called Human Resources Management no longer exists.

Instead, the College now is offering the program as Management of Human Resources.

The name change became effective in August. And, yes, the reordering of the words does make a difference, according to Dirk Barram, GFC's vice president for graduate and continuing studies.

"The rationale was to settle on a name that more accurately reflects the curricular content," Barram said. "Human Resources Management implies personnel management, whereas the program's curriculum is broader than personnel, focusing on generic management skills, and is applicable beyond the personnel field."

Barram said the new name was selected because it is similar enough to the original to retain the strong name recognition. He said it is believed the name change will appeal to a wider segment of members of the business community who may be considering returning to college to complete their degrees.

Celebration

their celebration, they glorified the Lord and gave Him credit for making the College what it is."

Credit for the success of the Centennial celebration goes to Barry Hubbell, assistant to the President, and members of the Centennial Committee, which he chaired.

Hubbell began collecting information about other college's centennial observances six years ago, and the committee first met to begin planning back in 1988. Like many other institutions, George Fox College included things like a dinner, time capsule, and published history to recognize its 100th year. Unique to GFC's Centennial, however, was the Centennial Fair and the construction of the Centennial Tower.

For Hubbell, leaving behind the tower as the focal point of the campus quadrangle made the Centennial a success. So did the crowd of 3,500 to 4,000 people who attended the three-day celebration.

"It's a case of you're glad that that many people like you and want to celebrate with you," he said.

For those unable to attend the celebration—or for those who want to savor the memories—the College is making videos of the weekend's events available for purchase. The Centennial Highlights Video contains highlights from Sunday's festivities, as well as excerpts from Monday night's time capsule dedication. The 60-minute tape sells for $19.95. Also available is an hourlong concert video of the performance by the Four Flats and Dayspring for $14.95, or both tapes can be purchased for $29.95.

Videos of the lectures by the Centennial Speakers are $9.95 each or $29.95 for all four.

To order any of the above videos, contact the George Fox College Video Communication Center.

Sportsmen of yesteryear

WINNING TRADITIONS at George Fox College had their start in the College's earliest years. A Heritage to Honor, A Future to Fulfill contains success stories of Bruin athletic teams, speech students, and music groups. It also tells of the sacrifices that helped make the College what it is today. Written by Ralph Beebe for the George Fox College Centennial, the 152-page hardback book includes more than 200 historical photos to supplement the fascinating history.

Alumni Office Initiates Class Executive Program Increased support for the Annual Fund and heard from four," she said. "I hadn't heard improved ties between alumni and the College are the goals of a new program begun at George Fox College this year.

The Class Executive Program uses volunteers to serve as liaisons between their classmates and GFC. Through letters and phone calls, these volunteers keep their classmates in touch with one another and the College while encouraging them to support the College financially.

Gary Brown, director of alumni and parent relations, initiated the program last spring and has been pleased with the results. "We've gotten some really good responses," he said, "including personal letters. People hadn't heard from one another in years. They've written letters to the class execs; I've gotten letters. Some people have started giving to the College again that hadn't given for years."

Abigail (Miller) Crissman volunteered to serve as the Class Executive for the Class of 1943. "I thought it would be a good thing to do," she said. "I thought maybe I could keep in contact with some of the members of my class."

She has enjoyed renewing the ties with people she went to school with. "I just from them since I'd left the College."

With the exception of some of the earlier classes that will be grouped together, the goal is to have a Class Executive for every class. Thus far, Brown has recruited 40 volunteers, with 10 positions still left to fill.

An alumnus need not be a graduate to serve as a Class Executive, and those from classes with more than 100 members may select assistants to help them.

The only requirements for the job are an ability to attend an annual meeting on campus and a willingness to write two letters over the course of a year and to follow up, if necessary, with phone calls.

The first letter is written during the annual meeting in the fall; the second is mailed in March. The staff of the Alumni Office converts the rough drafts into personalized letters and supplies envelopes, stamps, and return envelopes. Class Executives sign the letters and place them in the mail, with postage paid by the College.

Brown expects the Class Executive Program to have a dramatic impact on the percentage of alumni who give to George Fox College. While total giving by alumni in 1990-91 was up by more than $66,000 over the previous year, unrestricted giving to the Annual Fund was down. Alumni made just $73,475 in Annual Fund gifts-barely over half of the $140,000 goal and down $16,000 from last year.

Since unrestricted gifts go directly into the general budget to help keep tuition and student costs down, such donations are especially important. In addition, the Collins Foundation of Oregon has a matching grant program that could result in up to $25,000 of additional monies for the Annual Fund.

Of the seven colleges in Oregon that participate in the Collins program, George Fox College ranked last in 1989-90 for the percentage of alumni who are donors. In 1990-91, the College failed to qualify for the matching dollars because that figure fell to 11.8 percent. The other colleges' alumni donor percentages ranged from 20 to 41 percent.

As little as $5 a year qualifies alumni as donors, something Brown believes everyone is capable of giving. "My personal goal is to have 35 percent of alumni contributing to the unrestricted fund by 1995," he said. "I believe with the Class Executive Program working right, we can beat that."

STUDENT NEWS

Dayspring Tours the Northwest

Dayspring, George Fox College's touring vocal ensemble, began its 1991-92 season Sept. 9 with a packed concert schedule that ends in May after a nonstop month of travel.

Performing over 30 concerts this year, members of Dayspring will be on the road two weekends out of every month until May. From May 3 to May 31, they will travel throughout the Pacific Northwestincluding Washington, Idaho, Montana, and Oregon-where the majority of GFC students and alumni live.

Already the vocal ensemble has performed at the Oregon State Women's Prison, in retirement homes, and for various small churches in the area. Manager, driver, and chaperone Gary Brown said, "We try to keep the ministry focus. Performances at the big churches are fun, but that's not why we do this."

One lady from the 25- to 30-person congregation of Scotts Mills Friends Church in Scotts Mills, Ore., sent Brown a card saying, "For you to allow time in your busy schedule for our tiny congregation means a lot to

Though budgeted for by the College, Dayspring relies heavily on donations and gifts. Recently, the Crowell Trust Fund gave $5,000 in support of the ministry focus of the singers.

Last year the vocal ensemble performed at Disneyland and Magic Mountain in California. Brown said they drew large crowds and were able to sing "some solid Christian music." They were given an open invitation by Disneyland to return whenever they could.

Also among last year's highlights was the performance of the national anthem before a Portland Trail Blazers game in Memorial Coliseum. They've been invited back to sing, without audition, at least once this year for the Blazers.

In addition, the group recorded its own album, entitled "Forever In His Care," last year. The $8 cassette is sold by the College and at all Dayspring appearances.

Dayspring's emphasis on Christian ministry begins with the singers themselves. Brown said he believes the reason members of the group haven't had any serious conflicts or problems is because they worship together before every performance and on a daily basis while touring.

He said in the two years he has been a part of the group, "We have never had a bad concert, significant vehicle problems, or health problems. Some of the kids haven't even been able to speak before a concert, but the Lord touched them and they were able to sing for the performance.'

This year's members include first-year rookie Danielle Armstrong, a sophomore music education major from Astoria, Ore.; three-year veteran Missy Bullock, a senior music performance major from Portland; two-year veteran Tom Burks, a junior biblical studies major from Sisters, Ore.; and threeyear veteran Megan Heasley, a senior music performance major from Anchorage, Alaska.

Also part of Dayspring are freshman Darin Mitchem of Jefferson, Ore.; first-year rookie Scott Nilsen, a junior biblical studies major from Seattle, Wash.; three-year veteran Paul Seideman, a senior psychology/Christian ministries major from Boise, Idaho; and three-year veteran Christie Wilson, a senior music performance major from Costa Mesa, Calif.

Dayspring was founded in 1978 as a touring singing group representing George Fox College. A special "All-Dayspring Homecoming and Reunion" is scheduled for GFC's homecoming weekend Feb. 21 and 22. Former Dayspring members are encouraged to call Gary Brown, director of alumni relations, at 503/538-8383, ext. 223 for more information.

CAMPAIGN NEWS Collins Foundation

Gives GFC $350,000 The Collins Foundation of Portland, Ore., has awarded George Fox College a $350,000 campaign Officially launched in April, the Centennial Campaign has as its goal $16 million. More than $5 million in gifts and pledges have been raised to date.

grant in support of its latest fundraising

The Collins Foundation was founded in 1947 by four members of the Collins family. The purpose of the foundation is to operate and use its funds exclusively for religious, charitable, and educational purposes within the state of Oregon.

George Fox College has benefited from the generosity of the Collins Foundation before. The foundation gave $400,000 for a new chapel-performing arts center in the early 1980s, and in 1986, the College received $200,000 to expand and renovate its

The Collins Foundation also sponsors a program designed to stimulate alumni support at independent colleges and universities in Oregon. Since George Fox College began participating in the challenge grant program in the 1966-67 school year, the foundation has given GFC nearly $200,000 to encourage alumni giving.

Faculty and Staff Join Campaign

With the successful completion of the President's Council portion of the Centennial Campaign, efforts to raise a total of $16 million for George Fox College now center on the College's employees and alumni.

On Oct. 10, a kickoff dinner was held to launch the campaign among GFC faculty and staff. Advance gifts have reached $313,285. The total Faculty/Staff Campaign goal is $350,000. Serving as chairman of the campaign among his peers is Paul Chamberlain, professor of chemistry and chairman of the Division of Natural Assisting him is Ron Stansell, assistant professor of religion, as chairman of the advanced gifts committee, and campaign vice-chairmen Dirk Barram, vice president for graduate and continuing studies; Jim Foster, professor of psychology and chairman of the Division of Social Science; Jo Helsabeck, management of human resources instructor; and Craig Taylor, director of athletics.

President's Council Exceeds Goal

Despite the fact that members of the President's Council are already regular donors to George Fox College, 76 percent made new commitments in response to the challenge of the Centennial Campaign.

As a result, the President's Council Campaign exceeded its $1 million goal by more than $450,000. As of Sept. 30, the total raised since the campaign's launching in April stood at $1,456,594.

The President's Council was only the second group solicited since the Centennial Campaign began April 22. The strategy of the Development Office staff is to reach the total $16 million goal by breaking the campaign into segments. The President's Council was chosen to follow the trustee phase of the campaign because it was a group of people who already were committed financial supporters of George Fox College.

"They were like advance gifts for the entire campaign," Dave Adrian, director of development, said. "In essence, their campaign became leadership gifts as we launched the Centennial Campaign."

Although solicitation was scheduled until the end of June, members of the President's Council reached their $1 million goal by June 14. Their achievement sets a tone of success for the rest of the campaign.

Women's Soccer Joins Varsity Sports Offered at GFC

In early November of last year, Byron Shenk sent out 500 letters to Northwest high school girls' soccer coaches introducing himself and the infant women's soccer program he was building at George Fox College. He asked for names and evaluations of players who might be interested in playing for the Lady Bruins. He received two responses.

So much for mail-order soccer players. Despite a late start that didn't allow him to see any high school games, Shenk had 20 players join the team this fall. Most came through his personal contacts and word of mouth.

It has been hard to get top quality players to come to a brand-new program. "It's more difficult to recruit for than an established program," he said.

Shenk is molding a team from 12 freshmen, six returning GFC students, and two transfers. Despite the fact that other teams had a head start in recruiting, he does have players with outstanding ability.

Julie Jensen is an all-league midfielder out of Christian High School in El Cajon, Calif. She comes to George Fox after attending Cuyamaca Community College for two years.

Another midfielder who joined the Lady Bruins is Marla Wittkopp. She is a 1991 graduate of North Valley High School in Grants Pass, Ore., who started on the boys' team her junior year. "She's very competitive," Shenk said. "She's used to people trying to intimidate her." A member of Washington select teams, Michelle Clifton brings speed to the Lady Bruin offense. She is a 1991 graduate of Shelton (Wash.) High School who played midfielder and forward.

Six players with varsity high school experience already were on campus. On a team with no college soccer experience, the coach has six returning studentsseniors Jennifer Childress, Bellingham, Wash., and Nicole Speers, Tualatin, Ore.; junior Meghan Ross, Centralia, Wash.; and sophomores Roxanne Berg, Portland; Crystal Clark, Anchorage, Alaska; and Constance Wilhelm, Portland.

This is Shenk's 22nd year coaching soccer but his first leading women.

"The main differences are in speed, strength, and size," he said. "As far as tactics and technique are concerned, men's and women's soccer are absolutely identical."

Shenk coached men's soccer for 18 years at Virginia's Eastern Mennonite College and another three at Goshen College in

He came to George Fox College last year as an associate professor of physical education and assistant men's soccer coach after doing doctoral work at the University of Virginia.

People have told him not to expect any early success. "It's a tough district," they say. "A new team probably won't win any games for the first two years." "I thank them for their courtesy and kindness," says Shenk, "but I think if we play smart soccer we can beat a couple teams." (The Lady Bruins were 2-4-2 at midseason.)

Shenk says he knows he must be realistic about the time it takes to develop a team into a consistent winner, but "a tradition has to have a beginning, so why not begin early?'

Accident Claims Assistant Coach

A tragic bicycle-car accident has taken the life of one of the Northwest's top smallcollege female athletes in recent years.

Diane (Walter) Davis, a 1986 George Fox College graduate, died Wednesday, Sept. 18, at Oregon Health Sciences University Hospital in Portland after being struck by a truck on Sept. 11. She was 27.

Davis was bicycling two miles northwest of Newberg on North Valley Road, in training for triathlon competition.

The accident hit hard at the George Fox College community. The threesport athlete (volleyball, softball, and basketball) was an Diane (Walter) Davis assistant softball coach at George Fox,

as a student in 1985

helping her husband, Chris, GFC's head softball coach. She was assistant volleyball coach last fall.

Davis was a second-grade teacher at Newberg's Open Bible Christian School.

As a GFC student, Davis was an NAIA District 2 all-star in both softball and volleyball, named three years (1983, 1984, 1986) to the district's softball honors team as a shortstop.

In volleyball she was named a district allstar in 1984. She received George Fox's MVP award in volleyball three consecutive years. Twice, as a junior and again as a senior, she was named National Christian College Athletic Association District 8 Player of the Year in volleyball. She helped the Lady Bruins win the national NCCAA volleyball title in 1984. She was nominated as a national NAIA Academic All-American, with a 3.64 grade point

On the volleyball court, Davis was a middle blocker, leading the Lady Bruins in hitting, blocking, and defense for two years. She had a 99 percent service rate, missing just four serves as a senior. Over her four years in volleyball, Davis averaged more than 200 kills a season.

Davis also played basketball her junior and senior years, starting as a junior and hitting 22 points in her first game.

"In my four years as her coach, I've not had a person whose overall ability as a player, leadership, and academic excellence or coachableness stood out with such clarity as has Diane's," volleyball coach Steve Grant said after Davis received her senior awards. "She leaves a standard of excellence that will be a challenge for others to measure up to," Grant said at the time.

"She is one of the athletes in a class by herself," George Fox Athletic Director Craig Taylor said upon learning of her death. Taylor, who coached Davis in softball and basketball, said, "If you have one or two like Diane in your coaching career, you consider yourself blessed.

"Diane was the epitome of what Christian college athletics are all about."

As a student, Davis majored in elementary education and was active in the College's discipleship program.

The family has requested donations be made to George Fox College in her memory.

Graduate Program

education faculty will be augmented with three additional persons in the next two years.

Glenn Moran has been hired as director of the Graduate Teacher Education Program. A member of the George Fox College faculty from 1979 to 1986, during which time he served as director of teacher education, he left GFC to become principal of Wilsonville Primary School, West Linn. After four years in that position, he was named personnel director of the West Linn School District last year. Moran has a doctorate from the University of Northern

The new George Fox College program follows TSPC guidelines that provide for both fourth- and fifth-year programs to prepare teachers. Oregon lawmakers promoted the change, encouraging discussion of ways to improve teacher education, specifically in subject-matter knowledge by teachers. The Master of Arts in Teaching program allows the student to concentrate in a specific field, or major, during all four years of undergraduate work, receiving a bachelor's degree in a specific interest area. The fifth year is then spent in developing teaching

Students, however, still may participate in the four-year program, with George Fox College authorized to offer Oregon Basic Teaching Certificates in elementary and secondary education with endorsements for 12 fields. This year GFC has 195 students enrolled as education majors, and that number is not expected to drop with the new program, Moran said.

The M.A.T. program is expected to draw recent GFC graduates who have completed bachelor of arts or bachelor of science degrees in non-education fields, postgraduates from other colleges and universities, post-graduates wanting to reenter the work force as educators, and post-graduates interested in making a career change.

Students in the program will study psychological, sociological, historical, and philosophical foundations of education. They will apply these understandings in elementary and secondary classroom teaching experiences.

The George Fox College program will be offered in an initial summer session, followed by two full semesters of study. Thirtysix semester hours of class are required.

Thematic strands related to decision making, values, and multicultural awareness will be integrated throughout the program, according to Moran. They will add "affective and sociological qualities to the program that are not reflected in single courses but are interwoven throughout the curriculum," he said.

George Fox College has been authorized to prepare secondary school teachers since 1966, with that program expanded in 1969, 1971, and 1983. In 1984 the College was authorized to begin its program in elementary teacher education. Approval was renewed in 1990.

Beebe

Royalties from the book "Blessed Are the Peacemakers" are being divided between Beebe and the book's subject, Audeh Rantisi. Rantisi's half goes to fund higher education for Palestinians at the Evangelical Home for Boys in the West Bank, under Israeli military occupation. Beebe's half is designated for the Palestinian Scholarship Fund at George Fox College.

Currently the scholarship is helping Suleiman Rantisi fund his sophomore year at GFC as a computer engineering major.

Most Palestinians find it difficult to attain higher education because Israel's military is frequently closing their schools. Suleiman Rantisi's troubles are not over now that he is studying in America. In order to be able to return to his home after graduation, he is required by Israeli authorities to renew his permit regularly. This requires a trip home every three years.

"Sometimes when people go study three years [abroad] they [the Israeli military] don't let them go back to finish their last two years," he explained.

The naming of "Blessed Are the Peacemakers" as "Book of the Year" also involves a $500 cash award. Beebe said he and Audeh Rantisi decided that the money should go to GFC's Palestinian Scholarship

Through the scholarship, the book, and the interviews, Beebe hopes to accomplish four things: "I pray that my efforts will do a bit to bring justice to Palestinians, peace in the Persian Gulf, credit to George Fox College, and most of all, honor to Christ's name and message," he wrote in a letter.

During Christmas vacation, Beebe will travel as a Joseph J. Malone Fellow to Saudi Arabia and other gulf nations for an intensive three-week study tour.
