FOOTBALL, 1964

In December 1962 the Board of Trustees of George Fox College adopted a policy of "wholehearted support" of the athletic program. The first step to implement this policy was the contracting of a well-known Christian College coach, Earl Craven, who is now Director of Athletics. In the fall of 1963 a very young and small squad gave a fine account of themselves against four varsities and three reserve teams. There is very little basis of competitive experience to predict what they will be able to do on the schedule that faces them in 1964. A brief spring practice session highlighted by a closing full intrasquad game among the total turnout of 32 boys did more to raise football spirits than the actual past season. Forty-one boys reported for football for the 1964 season, by far the largest in the history of the school.

This season must be considered a year of "building" as the squad has only two wins in their first six encounters. The team has learned many lessons this year which should lead to a more "seasoned" squad for 1965. Los Angeles Pacific College may find a well-seasoned opponent in the Quakers in this game. Coach Craven's grid squad will be giving of their best for the 1964 Homecoming game. Last Saturday, GFC overcame a 12-point deficit to eke out a victory over the Seattle Cavaliers in the fourth quarter with a final of 13-12. The game today should be a close one, and we hope you enjoy it. The final game of the Quaker's 1964 season will be played in Monmouth next Saturday, November 14, at 1:30 p.m. against the Oregon College of Education.

Queen's Message

We of the student body of George Fox College welcome each one who has come to enjoy the weekend activities of Homecoming 1964. The Lord has been working in the lives of the students during the first few weeks of the school year. It is our hope that this shall continue through the weekend, and that in all events the name of the Lord Jesus Christ shall be exalted. As we renew acquaintances, meet new people, and praise the Lord in these days let us remember "He is before all things, and by him all things consist." Col. 1:17.

College History and Location

The early Quaker settlers of historic Willamette Valley were conscious that the democratic structure of their church required a well-educated membership. They made provision, therefore, for the education of their children even before the public schools offered many advantages in this part of Oregon.

Pacific Academy was organized in 1885. Herbert Hoover, the thirty-first president of the United States was a student of this early institution. He has said, "As a young student there for three years, I received whatever set I may have toward good purposes in life."

Pacific College was organized in 1891 to provide work more advanced than that which the Academy offered. Pacific Academy was discontinued in 1930, and the educational efforts of the Quakers centered about the college, which came to play an increasing role among the colleges and universities of the West.

Because of confusion resulting from a large number of institutions along the Pacific coast embodying the name "Pacific," the school was in 1949 renamed George Fox College, honoring one of the great leaders in the English Protestant reformation and the founder of the Friends Church.

Accreditation and Membership

George Fox College is accredited by the Northwest Association of Secondary and Higher Schools, and is a member of the National Council of Accrediting, the Association of American Colleges, the Association of Schools of Religious Education, the Friends Council on Education, and the Association of American Friends Colleges. The College, also, is approved by the Federal Government and the State of Oregon for the education of veterans, by the United States Attorney General for the admission of alien students, and by the Oregon State System of Higher Education for the training of elementary teachers in conjunction with the Oregon College of Education in a joint-degree program.
