Volume 4, Number 1: Letter from the Editor

Abstract

I am glad that this issue of the Journal has finally arrived. We have gone through some significant changes this winter. We have taken the Journal down from one host and relocated it. We have also changed the content management engine from Plone to WordPress. Both of these changes were needed as cost savings measures, and also as means to alleviate some of the need for continued upgrading of the software by Sean, McKay, our technical editor. As you can imagine, publishing takes time, even in the online environment. We are trying to learn this new software system. If you discover problems, from broken links, to pages that won't load, or out of place text, please let us know and we will correct those errors as soon as possible.

Letter from the Editor

Dear Colleagues,

I am glad that this issue of the Journal has finally arrived. We have gone through some significant changes this winter. We have taken the Journal down from one host and relocated it. We have also changed the content management engine from Plone to WordPress. Both of these changes were needed as cost savings measures, and also as means to alleviate some of the need for continued upgrading of the software by Sean, McKay, our technical editor. As you can imagine, publishing takes time, even in the online environment. We are trying to learn this new software system. If you discover problems, from broken links, to pages that won't load, or out of place text, please let us know and we will correct those errors as soon as possible.

I am pleased to announce that Christina Belcher has assumed the role of associate editor and we are grateful for her fine work in organizing the work of the Journal. See her comments in her letter contained in this issue. Please thank her when you get the opportunity to do so.

We are currently reviewing articles for the next issue of the Journal, which is scheduled for publication in Summer of 2009. Please send in your manuscripts for consideration.
