of 89 separate preparative meetings are listed) but also by the variety of local Quaker organisations, particularly during the nineteenth century: essay societies and book clubs, peace associations and branches of the Missionary Helpers' Union and the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavour, for example. It is not, of course, a full guide to every record concerning Yorkshire Quakers. Records generated by Friends at national level are excluded and only the personal, family and business papers held by the three partner universities are included. Business and personal papers in local record offices and in private hands are not covered. Nevertheless, this is an extremely valuable addition to the literature on Quaker sources, and is a model of succinct and user-friendly guidance. Oh that similar research guides might be compiled for other regions!
