MAGNIFY | Letter from the Team

Dear Reader,

When reflecting on the George Fox community, who we are both as a collective and as individuals, we have found ourselves dwelling on the relationships, unique opportunities, experiences, and the environments we interact with as a student body.

As humans, we find ourselves with an innate desire to be known. We are created to exist in community. Our mission as The Student Collective is to utilize this platform to foster community and strive to make you more known.

This mission led us to our theme, “Magnify.”

To magnify is to zoom in on the smaller, finer details of something in order to gain a more complete understanding of the whole. Magnification is used in a variety of fields to learn and discover. What...Why...Where. Ultimately, leading to a greater understanding of the Who.

By zooming in on the intricacies of life at Fox, amplifying individual stories and highlighting the little moments, we hope to learn more about the greater community and identity of George Fox.

Without further ado, pick up a magnifying glass (just kidding we wrote this in large enough font for you to read), and enjoy the VIII volume of The Student Collective.

Sincerely,
The Student Collective Team

What was your favorite experience from your time abroad?

My favorite experiences during my time abroad were all the moments I was able to explore the beautiful country of Ecuador alongside some of my closest friends that I met through my semester abroad. Through traveling and living in a different country, with a unique culture that is very different from that of the US, I gained a whole new appreciation and perspective for God's creation, both through the people He created in the likeness of His image and through the breathtaking pieces of nature that emanate His presence.

How did your time abroad contrast with your other semesters at Fox?

As a senior, I look back at the last eight semesters of my college career with fondness of the memories that I have made and gratitude for the friends that I made them with. This is especially true for my semester abroad. My time living in Ecuador will forever be a highlight of, not only my four years at George Fox, but my life as well, as this was truly a once in a lifetime experience.

What's the most important thing you learned in your time abroad?

The most important thing I learned during my time abroad is the art of intentionality. This can come in many different forms: intentionally pouring into the people you care most about; intentionally seeking God's kingdom on a daily basis; intentionally learning about a culture or people that share both differences and similarities to your own; or intentionally speaking a language foreign to you, even if that means embarrassing yourself time and time again. Although I am far from perfect at this practice, I have grown tremendously and I believe that both my relationship with God and my relationships with others are a true reflection of this growth.

Feel free to share anything else about your time abroad:

Thank you to the Study Abroad office, specifically Lynn Scott and David Martinez, who made it possible to study abroad amidst COVID-19. It was a semester I will never forget and I am beyond grateful for the experience.

What was your favorite experience from your time abroad?

My favorite moment would be a reel filled with the different faces that have given me a completely different worldview. The different faces that represent a place. I would capture the laughter of the inside jokes that were made. Friendships that I know will last a lifetime. I would capture the meals that were shared that introduced so much culture in a single breath. I would capture the places that took my breath away...places that I had only seen in movies, read about in books, and places that I had only dreamed of. I would capture the feeling of courageousness that certain tasks asked of me, the insatiable desire to be curious and ask a million questions, the note on my phone that categorized 11 different languages that I learned the basics of. I would capture the experience of courage and fear with exploring 4 countries on my own as a young brown female. I would capture the moments where I felt welcomed and a sense of belonging. I would capture the moments where I survived and thrived yet another week that I thought I was not going to be able to get through. I would capture the wonderful feeling of not knowing and being okay with that. I would capture the sounds of listening to the different languages around me and the different English accents all demonstrating that there is not a single original way to speak the English language. I would capture hitchhiking with strangers, sharing the Spanish language and Latinx culture with my roommates, the countless days spent at the beach, the nights dancing with friends, the incredible thrift finds, the 1 euro coffee, the tiny forks served with every pastry, the amazement in my face when I saw my roommate's laptop with the Cyrillic alphabet instead of the Latin alphabet, friends asking me "Hey Ivette, want to go to Sweden, it's only 10 euros?!" on a whim and realizing that no other place in the world have these things ever been possible.

How did your time abroad contrast with your other semesters at Fox?

During my time abroad, whenever I had to choose between an assignment and developing a strong connection or relationship with someone, I chose the person. I would enter the study room and my friends would enter and we would engage in conversation with each other for hours! I would be left with the assignment undone. But I went to sleep that night knowing one thing, I was happier and more satisfied with myself by choosing the people over the assignment. I wonder how much of this was attributed to my senioritis or being abroad, or perhaps a mixture of both.

What's the most important thing you learned in your time abroad?

During my time abroad, I only had 4 months to plant, nourish, and grow relationships with the people around me. It taught me about the art of goodbyes and the art of meeting new people. Some of the best advice I got before going abroad was to not be afraid to invest and nurture the relationships because of the time we had. Every connection, every friendship, and every conversation were all worth it. I do not view it as wasted energy just because I will not be back to LCC or with the same people...I view it as honoring the people and time around me. Because of this, I developed very strong and reliable friendships. Throughout the personal growth that a semester abroad entails, friends who can keep up with that growth and grow alongside you are needed. I learned what steadfast, loyal, and caring friends are like.

Feel free to share anything else about your time abroad:

If I could give anyone the gift of travel, I would. The gift of truly getting to know people, places, and things in the world. I think traveling opens up the world and personalizes it. It empowers to love thy neighbor more fiercely and care about what is going on in their side of the world.

Countries visited while abroad: Lithuania, Estonia, Latvia, Austria, Ukraine, Germany, France, Belgium, Czech Republic

STORY PORTRAITS | Angel Glockling

It's difficult to sum up what I've discovered during my time at Fox because of the transformative nature of my experience as a student and now as a professional. I think one point that I could touch on would be the wealth of community.

During my time as a student, I often found myself needing to rely on others because of difficult circumstances. As a first generation college student who was financially independent from my family, I faced additional stress and uncertainty as I navigated my four years in undergrad. However, what I discovered at Fox was a community of people who came around me and beside me, and would not let me fall. I discovered mentors who listened, shared wisdom, and prayed with me. I discovered staff who made it their mission to ensure that I received every bit of support they could muster, and who believed that I was capable. I discovered friends who made me better, challenged my thinking, and encouraged me to grow.

One person, specifically, who magnified my experience at George Fox was Dr. Steve Winterberg, my international studies professor. Throughout my time as a student, he invited me into challenging academic spaces and engaged with me on a personal level.

Two especially impactful things come to mind. First, during our advising sessions, Steve always made a point to pray with his students and bless their upcoming year. The way that he intertwined academic growth and spiritual growth was distinctly graceful. Second, was his belief in me. Steve knew that I eventually wanted to continue onto graduate school and eventually gain a doctoral degree. At some point my sophomore year, I greeted him as "Dr. Winterberg" as I passed him on the quad and he greeted me back as "Dr. Glockling". This exchange soon became our norm and an inside joke, but also encouraged me because I knew that he believed I would get there someday.

Sunsets from the big slide park and Dos Mundos tacos! Sunsets front the big slide park and Dos Mundos are just a couple of my favorite things in Newberg.

Black drip coffee is my forever go-to drink :)

STORY PORTRAITS | Breeauna O'Rear

The Biology Department here at Fox is a place that has allowed me to be known on campus. I have been able to ask professors questions about both science and faith. When professors check in about life outside of the classroom it helps me stay motivated in my goals and passions.

Another place I feel known is on the Track & Field team. My coaches and teammates have always built me up and allowed me to express the better parts of who I am, helping to strengthen my faith and character. It is such a strong source of community in my life! This leads me into answering who has magnified my time here at Fox. My roommate Ellie, my genetics professor Matt Stump, close teammates and coaches have helped make my time at Fox worthwhile. These people combine to make an extremely important piece of my life and I am so grateful to have their shining lights surrounding me.

My go-to coffee drink here in Newberg is a blended, dirty, spiced chai (especially good from Sip City)! A few fun places in the Newberg area are the Alpacas of Oregon, the hills up near Bald Peak, Critter Cabana, and Chapters!

STORY PORTRAITS | Caleb Wood

Community is everywhere at Fox. Moving here my freshman year, I didn't know anyone, didn't know my way around campus, didn't have anyone to turn to. It took all of an hour to realize that the 3 guys I was rooming with would be some of the best friends anyone could have. Hadlock opened a month after I came to Fox, and it ignited my passion for bouldering. I have a solid group of friends I've made through the hours we have spent on the climbing wall while puzzling through hard routes. As an engineer, the Maker Hub is my home. I've spent many, many hours there, working on projects, homework, and presentations with my fellow engineers. The engineering program is its own community; everyone knows one another, including the professors. All of us students work together, help each other out, study together and slog through homework together. It's also where I met my amazing fiancée. I love you, Syd. Finally, I found a great community working for Plant Services. I've been working grounds here at Fox for 2 years now, and it has been an incredible two years working with such amazing and kind people.

I know that I have made an impact on many students here at Fox in many ways, but one thing that I enjoy the most is getting to mentor freshman engineers. I've mentored 4 freshman engineers here at Fox. It's been crazy and fun introducing them to the engineering program, helping them along the way, giving them advice on life and projects, and making friendships that bridge the gap between freshman and upperclassmen. I love teaching people and sharing the knowledge that I have gained through my experiences; getting to help people in the shop and the Maker Hub is one of the best parts of being an engineer here at Fox. One word of advice: you don't want to regret any of your time here, and as an engineer, I know I spent too much time on studies and homework. Do yourself a favor, put the books down, and go spend time with friends. They are more than worth getting a B in a class.

Newberg is a beautiful area, with a lot of hidden places to find. I would suggest getting on a bike, picking a direction and not turning back until the sun starts to set. Every road is beautiful going through the hills. Bald Peak is one of my favorite spots to bike to. I also love walking down to the river as well as downtown Newberg. If you haven't, check out Antique Freak & Flea on 2nd Street, you never know what you will find in there. Now, I know it isn't exactly close to Newberg, but make sure you and some friends take at least one beach day trip out to Pacific City. Finally, Nara Teriyaki is probably the best restaurant in Newberg.

STORY PORTRAITS | Cate Snedecor

At Fox, I have begun the hard process of realizing and believing that I am not defined by others' opinions and expectations of me. No matter how hard I work to succeed academically, decide what I believe through theological and philosophical wrestling, and make responsible choices to be a good human, it is impossible to please everyone. Rather than give up these challenging aspects of growth, I have learned that I need to choose a different goal than being the person others would like me to be. Additionally, I am continually realizing how expansive the love of God is. Through the writings of saints, the presence of the Holy Spirit, and inside jokes with Jesus, I recognize more and more the personal nature of the God of the Bible. God is wild, passionate, and funny. Despite our vastly deepened relationship, beginning to know God has taken away my ability to articulate God's nature. God is too much for words. Finally, when I began college, I was proud of my knowledge, but I was afraid of unimportant things: my future career, etc. Now I recognize how small my knowledge is, and I have started to recognize what is worthy of care and attention.

I have had several crises in college so far. Major shifts in my theology and worldview occurred over time. Through such discussions as deciding whether or not I'm a heretic, piecing through the theology of sex, and understanding the love of God, one professor has made a huge impact by walking me through difficulties and particularities. Dr. Isaac Choi is a professor of theology and the director of the Honors Program. He is an attentive listener even when my thoughts are not well articulated. He is also a helpful role model and advisor. Even though I don't agree with all of his ideas, his convictions are solidly thought out and help me to see a broader perspective when I get lost in details. Additionally, Olivia Brubaker has been a steadfast source of the encouragement and love of Christ through my often heavy and chaotic experiences in college. She has shown me what a long-standing, healthy friendship practically looks like. I find it difficult to trust people, but by her kindness and constancy, she has proved that she is worthy of trust.

Coffee Cottage is wonderful, especially if you enjoy getting distracted from homework by friends that are likely to be there at the same time. I love going there early in the morning to have "office hours" with friends, do homework, and overhear Bible studies. Going on runs on Mountainview Road near the Allison Inn is also a favorite spot of mine.

The Maker Hub is my current favorite spot to study. During the warm months, I love sitting on a hidden bench next to the amphitheater.

STORY PORTRAITS | Olivia Nygreen

I am a long-distance runner, so I found my community in cross country and track. Joining a team that made me feel like I was “known” was amazing. It wasn’t easy to be around my teammates during my freshman year. Because of the experience I had with my high school teammates during my junior and senior years of cross country, I didn’t have the greatest social experience. It made me nervous, thinking I would be going through the same thing but after giving it a chance for my first year, I realized that running on this team has significantly changed my life. I promised myself that I would stay involved and stay motivated for others. Making that decision turned my life around, and it truly magnified my experience.

There are so many people how have magnified my experience here. First, there are my parents. I never thought I would be attending college in another state. When my parents and I were having the conversation about me possibly attending GFU, I was happy to hear that they were supportive and would be excited for wherever I ended up. Their support has been massive, and I’m grateful for that! Then there’s also my friends. This goes towards anyone I’ve had a class with, been teammates with, and anyone I’ve lived around over the last 4 years (Edwards, Brandt, Newlin, Hodgin). Fox has allowed me to connect with so many people and hear their stories. Regardless of if I am graduating with friends or have friends that will still be around Fox after I graduate, I plan to stay connected with everyone as much as possible. They are the ones that have made me the person that I am today.

I am a coffee person! I often default to an Almond Joy Mocha from Coffee Cottage since it reminds me of my frequent drink orders in my hometown of Chelan, Washington.

Over the years, I have found different places to have fun around campus. You can always catch me at our track on campus for practice and competitions with my teammates. Lately, I’m usually studying or having people over for movies, game nights, dinners, etc. This has been full of hangouts at my house, and I’ve enjoyed every minute of it!

STORY PORTRAITS | Owen TenBrook

A person who magnified my experience here is Nathanael Ankeny, my Jazz Ensemble director. Nathanael is an absolutely kind and encouraging educator, who often inspires the best in his students. His mantra, “learning should be fun”, has been one that has defined my approach to music and life all these years at Fox. I have been very grateful to have had Nathanael for a class each semester since coming to Fox.

I have discovered my interest in multiple areas of my field of music, from the production of music to the history and theory behind it. I also discovered a more varied and diverse love for multiple genres spanning jazz, rock, classical, Broadway, and much more. One big discovery I made was my interest in past and recent history and how they shape culture and politics on a global scale. The COVID-19 Pandemic especially helped open my eyes to the real need to be aware of the events happening in our world, and to pay attention to them carefully.

I am a commuter student, but I often spend the majority of my day on campus. So, often times, you will find me either in Ross (the music building) or the Foxhole. I also love going to the Human Bean and getting their Piña Colada smoothies.

STORY PORTRAITS | Connor Shelton

I have felt so known here at Fox. For example, I had the amazing opportunity last spring to study abroad in the UK. The Center for Study Abroad has been such a great resource for me, with so many opportunities. Even with so many uncertainties, I was still able to travel with Fox and look forward to Juniors Abroad this spring. There are also more trails in the canyon than I ever realized. With Fox being a liberal arts college, there is such an interdisciplinary manner amongst students. I have known so many people who are in the STEM departments who enjoy learning about and taking classes in humanities and vice versa. I myself have loved my classes that are not within my major such as general biology, communications, TESOL, and political science. My major classes have also enhanced my love of history and stretched my thinking and challenged me in so many wonderful ways.

There have definitely been many places that I have found community here. Choir has been a constant source of long lasting friendships and being known, with Danielle Warner being the embodiment of being known. The Theatre Department has been so welcoming to me during this past production of Godspell, with these performances being one of the highlights of my time at Fox. I have also been a student employee at the College of Business and the Archives, connecting me to people both within and outside of my major. Faculty and staff members that have become such an integral part of my life include Caitlin Corning, David Martínez, Rachel Thomas, Lynn Scott, Angeleen Umfleet, and Danielle Warner.

I am a sucker for chai lattes! At Coffee Cottage, I love their oatmilk Chai Latte and Chapters has their infamous Pumpkin Pie Chai (offered year round, too!).

The basement of the Library is a wonderful place to do homework. I also often find myself walking throughout the canyon. It is a great place to relax and just enjoy nature without even leaving campus.

STORY PORTRAITS | Dr. Ross McCulloch

I am not a Quaker, but one spot I love is Newberg Friends Church. The age of the place gives it both a dignity and a sanctity – the dignity of pre-war American church architecture, and the sanctity from the generations of Friends who still in some way inhabit the space – that is hard to find in the rest of town. If you can get into the sanctuary when it is raining and leave the doors open and the lights off, the veil of the world can be very thin indeed.

My go-to order is a Strawberry Mango smoothie at Coffee Cottage. It's healthy. I'll also get the milkshakes, which are probably about as healthy.

Perhaps it is trite, but the truth is that it is the students who have magnified my experience at Fox. I've taught at Ivy League schools and other elite institutions and the students at Fox have an enthusiasm and engagement that I haven't seen elsewhere. Much of this may be because of their faith, which makes them existentially engaged with the discussions in a way that secular students sometimes find hard – it is easier to be mercenary or sociological about these questions when your fundamental goals in life, at least so far as you can articulate them, have to do with getting the best job, class position, or the like. An evangelical faith also gives students a biblical literacy that provides a shared foundation for probing these questions that is deeper than just Marvel movies, video games, and a hazy American mythos – and because the foundation is deeper, it is easier to build higher upon it. Those kinds of discussions are rewarding not just as a teacher, because they are pedagogically flattering, but also as a person or student myself, because I end up taking at least as much from the seminars as my students.

STORY PORTRAITS | Dustin Garcia

The biggest discovery I was able to make at Fox was the opportunity I got to meet God. Before coming to Fox I had never worshiped, gone to chapel or even heard about Vespers. Throughout my time here I was blessed with the opportunity to build my faith and relationship with God. Through faith learning integration, I was able to identify the very nature of God across all disciplines. I learned how to combine my faith and learning, how to honor Christ, and how to actively practice my faith. When leaving your home to come to college, it can be easy to feel lonely and question the choices you’ve made. The opportunities George Fox has created everyone allowed me to combine my purpose with my passion. As I prepare for the vocation God has chosen for me, I feel excited and thankful. Through God’s will and my faith growing journey at Fox, I have been equipped with the skills to have a faith-based mindset and behavior. This is a huge benefit to me as I feel more encouraged in my spiritual maturity.

I will never forget Richard N. Muthiah, Ph.D, Director of Learning Support Services. Having him come into our freshman Liba class to introduce himself was a blessing in disguise; as I did not know just how much he would help me. Dr. Muthiah helped me in my struggles in acclimating to the way things worked in college. Being a first generation student I had no idea what to expect and once I actually got here it became overwhelming, but Dr. Muthiah made it his goal to help me in any way he could so I could get back on track and focus on my classes and do what I came here to do. He did just that, helping me both in and out of school and even reaching out to help my family who has supported me throughout the years. Dr. Muthiah magnified my experience at Fox because he was the first person I met to fulfill George Fox’s “be known” promise.

Bald Peak is such a nice place to go if you want to be at peace. When I first heard about it Freshman year, it sounded interesting but it wasn’t until my junior year I actually got to visit it. It’s a great place to be where you can literally be above the clouds and oversee a panoramic view of the city.

I often found myself in the library. I used to go from class to library and library to class. I was trying too hard. I learned to create a healthy balance between taking breaks, getting lunch, and having an appropriate amount of study time.

STORY PORTRAITS | Jere Witherspoon

One of the qualities I admire at George Fox is our desire to know our students. At the heart of the ‘Be Known’ promise is a desire to see each individual as unique and beloved. Before this marketing slogan was selected, the entire community participated in a survey that solicited information about what people liked about our community.

According to research, when college students form meaningful relationships with trusted adults, their capacity for resiliency grows.

The culture here provides incredible opportunities for young adults to interact meaningfully with older adults, including their peers. Our community provides spaces for people to share their stories and for both parties to engage in self-discovery.

As a student employee supervisor, it has been my pleasure to meet some fabulous students. While they each had unique characteristics, they all have one thing in common: they hold a special place in my heart. As I’ve listened to their stories, I have discovered that I am the one who has grown and changed. We have laughed and cried a lot. Secrets revealed, fears exposed—all of this provided fertile ground for our relationship to thrive. Many of us are still in touch today.

One of my favorite songs is Chris Tomlin’s ‘Indescribable.’ This song is about God having a personal relationship with His creation. These words ring true for me because I have witnessed the indescribable depths of God’s love throughout my life. But the words that always bring me to my knees speak to God’s unconditional love for me.

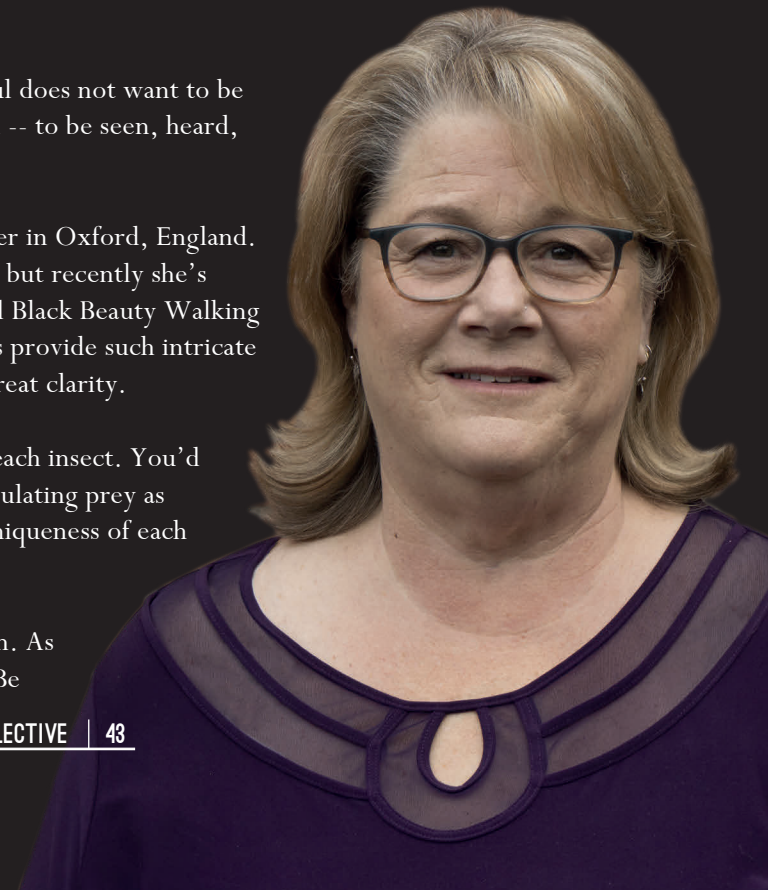

You see the depths of my heart
And You love me the same

Author and educator, Parker Palmer says “The human soul does not want to be advised or fixed or saved. It simply wants to be witnessed -- to be seen, heard, and companioned exactly as it is.”

Ashley, a GFU alumna, is a Senior Postdoctoral Researcher in Oxford, England. Ashley raises insects. She primarily raises Praying Mantis, but recently she’s been sharing the most detailed photos of a newly acquired Black Beauty Walking Stick. Using a high-powered camera lens, Ashley’s photos provide such intricate images, allowing the viewer to see these creatures with great clarity.

Without her camera lens, we would miss the nuances of each insect. You’d miss the modified appendages around their mouths manipulating prey as they dine. Thanks to this magnification, we can see the uniqueness of each insect. Let me tell you, they do not all look the same.

Our ‘camera lens’ is our ability to communicate and listen. As Palmer says, witness each other. As our slogan suggests, Be Known.

STORY PORTRAITS | Nicole Lindblom

This year I got the opportunity to be part of the Residential Life team. Being an RA has surrounded me with a group of super fun people who are genuine and intentional with their interactions and words. They not only support me but everyone they encounter. Chatting with them always leaves me feeling encouraged and fulfilled. This semester I have also gotten the opportunity to get to know the Outdoor Recreation Team through being an apprentice. Through OREC I have found people with similar interests and passions while teaching others how to invest in the beautiful outdoors the Pacific Northwest offers.

My experience at Fox has been magnified by my professors as a whole and the way in which they engage beyond the classroom. As someone who has participated in both an engineering and financial planning major, I’ve experienced that different parts of every academic department engage with students outside the classroom in different ways. The Engineering program has the Engineer Your Soul (EYS) program which engages faith values and brings people together outside the usual academic goal. Within the Business department I’ve experienced the opportunity to form personal connections with professors. One of my professors and I even read a book together because (if we can insert why that would be dope).

As for my favorite drink, I will always go for an Americano with Oat Milk from anywhere. However, Chapters does have a pretty good Pumpkin Pie Chai.

STORY PORTRAITS | Olivia Brubaker

I, like many other teenagers, thought I had life figured out when I was in high school. I had a strong sense of identity and worked hard to equip myself with all the skills needed to accomplish undergraduate studies. This haphazard foundation was quickly dissipated upon my arrival at Fox. My naive sense of self was challenged by complex classes, course schedules, relationships, and theological questions. However, George Fox University crafted the perfect environment needed to build me into the woman of faith I wanted to be.

My identity was deeply ingrained in my family and my hometown, Sacramento. Moving into the dorms was an abrupt transition, but Brandt Hall quickly adopted me into its unique family. Professors were also quick to establish relationships with me, and students were eager to collaborate with me in those difficult classes.

Though the academic experience at Fox was a great blessing, I believe the greater gift of Fox was the intellectual challenge of faith and self. I had the pleasure of participating in a Life Group led by graduate Cana Buckley, which centered around resisting the worldly “hustle” - the idea that one has to be as productive as possible with their time - and discussed utilizing God’s design for rest and work. I was challenged to look at my life from a Biblical perspective, and even evaluate how high on a pedestal I had put my scholastic success. This Life Group taught me to focus on the valuable relationships around me, and to rest well.

Next, the George Fox Honors Program revitalized my faith and taught me great humility. Reading texts of the Early Church and of other ancient religions caused me to realize how much my faith operated based on assumptions. Some of these foundational assumptions were radically changed in the face of Biblical analysis and early church tradition. The Socratic style discussion put me at odds with fellow believers, in a way where we all grew. I learned to greater respect my faith, and the interpretations of others.

The community at Fox is certainly irreplaceable, but as a student, I spent plenty of time alone studying. I discovered Fox’s background noise helped me hone in and focus; I found myself often at a table in the Maker Hub, or reclined on a sofa in the EHS atrium, listening to the sounds of whirring fans and chattering students. When I needed a break, I would find a lawn chair on the quad and soak in the sunbeams, watching students come and go. All of these places gave me great perspective on how I am just a piece of the puzzle, a cog in the machine. And what a beautiful fact that is.

STORY PORTRAITS | Taryn Blum

The professors and faculty have completely magnified my experience here at Fox. I started my college education at a large state university where I often felt like just another face in the crowd. When I transferred to George Fox, it only took one day for me to feel at home. The professors and faculty facilitated a learning environment that allowed me to feel seen, heard, and known. For the first time in college, I was getting thorough feedback on my work. This gave me the confidence to identify strengths in myself that I didn't know I had. One professor in particular recognized my dedication and passion for the nursing field and gave me the opportunity to conduct research alongside her. This opportunity inspired a new passion for research and innovation that I want to continue to pursue throughout the entirety of my career. This is only one example of how the professors and faculty inspired new passions and interests for me. Throughout the nursing program, I grew genuine connections with my nursing peers, and all of my faculty and professors. When I was going through personal trials in my life, my professors listened to me and were flexible with my situation. When I was unsure about where I wanted to go in my nursing career, I had people listen to me and give supportive and considerate advice. Overall, my experience at Fox has been magnified by the people around me who make me feel seen, heard, and recognized.

One thing that is really important to me is to leave a positive impact on those around me. I try to lean into everyday with optimism and a cheerful spirit. Not only does this allow me to feel happy and content, I also have found that this kind of attitude is contagious and creates a positive environment. I strongly believe that everyone has something good to contribute to a group. We are better off as a whole if we identify, recognize and capitalize on the good of people as opposed to focusing on the negative. I try very hard to make others feel seen, heard and valued for their contributions and strengths.

The only drink I will consume in Newberg is a Coffee Cottage iced Caramel Macchiato with oat milk. I 10/10 recommend this drink to everyone because it is Heaven in a cup.

You will often find me at Hadlock Student Center! I might be biased, but I believe we have one of the best college workout facilities. I remember touring campus for the first time and being in awe of the huge windows in the gym that overlooked the beautiful green landscape outside. I find it super enjoyable to get a good workout while taking in the outside view. It also helps that Hadlock is always playing the best music!

STORY PORTRAITS | Tori Lopez

One of the reasons I came to Fox was because “being known” was a core value I had growing up and I was encouraged that Fox based their community on this promise. I believe that we are called to love one another, I am not meant to be a judge but a friend and ally. I strive to make everyone feel seen and heard. I believe being known is not only a promise I want to make on campus but an ideal I have for my daily life. I want this ideal in life because when I feel seen on campus it makes me feel like I belong. It gives me stability and confidence to live life with joy, knowing I am loved. During these past years at Fox I have discovered that accepting and affirming others is key in building community. I strive to impact the world in a way where everyone feels seen and heard. I have been an RA at Fox for two years now and what I have learned is that building an environment to laugh together, have Dino Chicken Nugget Nights, and literally fight over Stuart (our apartments unofficial/official mascot) is easy when you all have respect for each other's stories. While we acknowledge that we are all different, we choose to celebrate those differences. I hope the people I meet and the friends I make, know what it is to be appreciated and loved because that's what being known means to me.

From my time at Fox I have discovered that in life, grades aren't everything and how you did on a test doesn't matter. What matters is how you choose to walk through life, what type of person you want to be and how your actions will show that. I think the best piece of advice a professor gave me was that college will be hard and we will struggle, but that's why we came to college. I came to college to learn and grow from my experiences. Throughout these last years, I have discovered a passion for building community and creating meaningful relationships with others. I have found my core people where we laugh until we cry, sing terribly in the car, and dance in the rain.

Lol, my go-to drink always changes but my favs are a small Cinnamon Twist from Coffee Cottage or a Peppermint Candy Cane Latte with peppermint syrup (because I'm a fru fru drink person) from Chapters. I'm always down for a Chai Tea Latte and honestly, I will not lie, I might sell my soul for a Bridge Cafe London Fog because they are literally my favorite thing on earth right now.

I often find myself walking around campus throughout the quad, but somewhere I'll always be, is EHS. I really enjoy being in EHS, saying hi to everyone and just sitting in professors offices, stealing snacks and talking about life. I love that I have a building on campus that I can go to and know almost everyone's name. EHS is one of my favorite places at Fox and it really is my second home.

STORY PORTRAITS III

THIS IS WHERE WE

Honor the community members who've impacted and inspired us with their unique stories

For me, all research, teaching and learning should lead us to a deeper and richer prayer. My research and teaching here at Fox focuses particularly on the novel and the role of story in shaping how we understand ourselves and our world. As part of that, I've been particularly amazed lately by the risks God takes in revealing himself through texts—through narratives of his engagement with humans.

In Christian tradition, we are accustomed to thinking about the vulnerability of God the Son in the Incarnation. The image of a newborn, nursing amid a cattle stall, is well-rehearsed and even in its unexpected humility, such vulnerability is marked with the beauty, goodness, and freshness of new life. But what is it for God to reveal himself with the vulnerability of an old man at midnight, in the wisdom and frailty of experience—of loss, rejection, disappointment, questionable choices, and failures? What is it for God to offer an unflinching look at himself risking ridicule and rejection? What is it for God to open the book of his own life and ask generation after generation “Do you love me? Will you be mine now that you know who I am and what I've done? Can I be your god now that you know my story?”

Trusting others with our stories is not easy—most of us don't share our stories with others until we know those others are safe, until we know that we are loved and valued. It is humbling and disconcerting even, that God not only trusts humans with his story, but invites us to worship or reject him in and through that story.

My third-floor office in Minthorn is definitely my favorite place on campus. The office is big, with two tall windows, a full wall of bookcases, a comfy chair, and a view of the quad. I sometimes come to work before 6am to write and find the quiet of those early hours really lovely.

STORY PORTRAITS | Joseph Harrison

I am blessed to have had a great experience at Fox, and when I think of my experience being magnified, I think of the small pieces, or the moments that, when magnified, reflect the whole. While many people in the Fox community help in magnifying a positive experience, one who stands out was someone that I was not expecting.

There is a current student at Fox who is entering his senior year, and several years ago, in the summer before his freshman year, he came up to my office looking for help in completing a form. While explaining what he needed to do, we got caught up in conversation, with me being able to hear a bit about his journey in coming to Fox. Every so often, this student will stop by, or send me a note, even if he doesn't have a question. He just wants to say hello and make sure he checks in on how I am doing. In the hustle and bustle of academic life, this student takes the time to show that he cares. He is delivering the Be Known promise. To me, this is an example of the moments and relationships that can be magnified to reflect the whole. What a magnificent gift he gave me.

I grew up in a small town and came from a church, a school, and a life where I was a name, and not a number. Moving on to college and beginning a career were really daunting steps to take in entering the big world, and I was sure I would not be able to be known as well as I had been in that small community. I am thankful to say that was not the case, and now, seven years after beginning my journey at Fox, that still holds true.

Not to sound cliché, but I feel known as soon as I walk through the door. At work, my colleagues and my intern team are supportive of me both in my career and in my personal life. They know what I am going through, they jump in where they can, and they not only know my story, but are willing to share their story with me. I have laughed with colleagues, cried with them, and some of the most transformational moments of my life have happened through my community at Fox. To those I work with, and those I work for, I thank you for making me and every student, staff, and faculty at Fox Be Known. What a magnificent gift you gave me.

If I could walk through any area of campus, I would have to choose the stairwell in EHS. Looking through the glass walls facing the quad conveys a form of serenity, even in stressful times. On autumn days when the sun is out and the quad is bright with trees of many colors, it reminds me not only of God's wonderful creation in nature, but also that he created the opportunity that I have at Fox to learn and grow. What a magnificent gift God gave me.

STORY PORTRAITS | Kathy Harris

I feel known at GFU because I have the pleasure of being placed at a front desk position where I get to be the first one folks see when they approach our offices. I have the ability to help people to find their way and to be the first to respond to their needs. I enjoy so much getting to know our students and the majors in the departments that I get to work in. It is the best job I've ever had! Getting to meet all of these lovely people and to be able to help them navigate through their time here is the joy of my career. Here at GFU, I am not only allowed, but ENCOURAGED to get to know and get involved in the lives of these young people. And, truth be told, it's not just the students, but I also get to be a part of the lives of the wonderful people that I get to work with as well. I so love a job that I am encouraged to do what is so ingrained in my soul to do. I love meeting people and getting to know them at a level that they are comfortable with and being involved with them even after they leave this place. I have the honor of still being in contact with so many of the young folks here. To get to go to their weddings, the birth of their children, celebrate their continuing education, to see the homes they buy, to pray for them as they serve others, to be a part of their lives beyond being a student here. That speaks volumes for how much this means to me to 'be known' at GFU. I am a huge "people person" and I get to engage in that part of me by working here – it's the best part of my job.

I am so very touched by the other employees here and their spirit for the students here too. Watching our faculty absolutely CARE for the students and to be so invested in their outcomes as well as their overall well-being just moves my heart. When I see them interact with a student (whether it's one of theirs or not) when they need the help or encouragement – the faculty and staff is always ready and willing to be that support. I love working in a place that provides us the ability to be good humans to each other, to be able to treat people the way I would want to be treated. I love witnessing these situations. We get to express God's love to others by being "known" to one another.

I find myself wandering on campus on my time off frequently. I walk a lot, and I've walked around this campus often just wondering what memories are being made here and day dreaming about the friendships and relationships that this place provides for the students. I love taking the walks around the campus to explore new areas and pathways and go into buildings to explore the rich history that they hold. If the walls could talk!! When I worked in Minthorn for so many years, I was given so many stories by folks who used to live there back in the early years. Stories of a boyfriend climbing a ladder to woo his best gal at her window on the second floor, or of the classes they took in that building. I even heard of the PE classes that were held on the dirt floor of the basement a VERY long time ago. These buildings and spaces were the catalyst for so many relationships over the years. Friendships that last a lifetime with hours of memories to be had. Marriages that were brought together because of these wonderful spaces and have lasted a lifetime and their children and children's children who have or now attend because of the inviting times these folks shared. Those are my daydreams when walking the campus of GFU in the 21st century. If only the walls could talk.

"I got you." This is a phrase my student Rachel would say when we were navigating the Amazon jungle with our team. This reassuring answer to my requests represents a couple discoveries I've made at Fox. One: My students teach and encourage me just as much as I teach and encourage them. The people at GFU have such amazing hearts--they want to help people and make a difference in the world. They are passionate about serving the Lord, and they know that this is their training ground. But the moments when I get to really see them shine are the moments when things aren't working out the way we planned. I see them rise up, encourage each other, and work hard as a team.

Our Amazon research trip was such a moment. We didn't even know that we were going to Perú until the week before we left. Our well-laid plans to minister and do research in Nicaragua were canceled due to political unrest there. And suddenly I found myself leading my team to a country I'd never been to, with contacts I've never met before. The way they came together amazed me. "Can you translate this?" "I got you." "Can you make sure everyone has sunscreen?" "I got you." "Can you learn how to teach people to make a solar oven?" "I got you."

Here, I see my students minister to each other--explaining challenging material, delivering a care package, planning educational and self-care activities, and more. They minister to me through thank-you cards, asking how I am, and active listening in class.

The second discovery I made at Fox is that God's "got me." I get to work at a place where my skills, knowledge, and passions can come together to discover and serve God more. And I get to see how God weaves all things together for the good of my students. The Perú trip was a good example of that. Even though all of my plans had fallen through, it became clear that God had planned this trip all along--he just didn't tell us about it until the week before.

I get to discover God's providence in the challenges of daily life. When I'm stressed, God says "Cast all your anxiety on me." When I'm not sure how I'll navigate all of the urgent demands on my time, God says "I will go before you and prepare the way." When I have an important decision to make, "I will advise you and watch over you." When I'm so tired I can barely see straight, "Come to me...and I will give you rest."

Whenever I have fear, need, confusion, doubt, or trial, God says "I got you." This is a message I want to pass on to my students.

A few places in Newberg I often find myself at include the prayer labyrinth and walking path at North Valley Friends Church. Roger's Landing also has a beautiful view of the river which I frequently enjoy.

Coming from over 40 years of experience playing choral concerts and vocal recitals, accompanying and coaching celebrities in the opera world and some local shining lights--including GFU voice instructors Maggie Daane and Jill Soltero—and traveling the world for Community Concerts Association with various artists--it is through a strong magnifying lens that I look back to summer of 1980, the first of many summers I spent shirtless in cut-offs, shoveling manure on a Newberg farm.

It was about twelve years later that I accompanied distinguished alumni Richard Zeller, later of the Metropolitan Opera, performing for my first time in the brand new Bauman Auditorium, with its impressive organ and world-class pianos! Even now, I still get that feeling of awe, sitting with a hundred masked singers on the stage, with the lovely conductor and ‘Magician of Music’ Dr. Danielle Warner pulling musical ‘rabbits’ from out behind our Covid protection. These people are my best friends, whom I know already so well (without having ever seen their mouths) by the sounds of their voices. These “my peeps” are the reason I am here.

I think it was God’s plan for me to come here—to be a learning experience in living Faith—and to challenge my own long-growing cynicism of this world and its doings. I know I’ve also been challenging to Dr. Dwayne Corbin and Kathy Harris just by adjusting and learning the ropes! I am so glad to see the magnifying power of God and His music work together in transforming lives—including mine—for the better.

My favorite places in Newberg are Goodwill (what color on sale this week?), Dairy Queen, Panda Express, Starbucks, Burgerville USA (when I have time), McDonalds (when I don’t), Ace Hardware, and driving under the trestle on upper Villa Road. I usually come here via the country roads, and sometimes pass a certain all-too-familiar manure-filled barn and its denizens! I visit antique stores, and count the horses and barns as I fly past! I love Oregon Hazelnuts!

I treasure the Keurig coffee machine in the Music Office, and appreciate and am empowered by the wonderful copy machine there. My hidden gem would be the Collaborative Piano Studio I share with my brilliant colleague Dr. Hana Lim. I hope every singer will be able to come and work with me there during our time here!

George Fox is an intentional and exceptionally welcoming place. It was my initial interactions with the broader community of George Fox that first drew me to the university. When I was first on campus, Adam Puckett (Athletic Director) told me he was looking for coaches who “love Jesus, want to pour into our athletes, and have a competitive fire to win.” I was looking for those exact foundational values, and I have seen that at work every single day since joining the staff.

I feel known and “at home” amongst the athletic staff, administration, and the teams I have the privilege of working with each day. My Athletic Director checks in regularly, grabs coffee with me, notices the nuances and details of what we’re doing... that is a rare thing amongst athletic administrators, and it creates an energy and drive to excel within the whole department. The teams are amazing - not just athletically but personally, and that is a credit to both the students themselves and the great group of coaches John Smith has put together here. The genuine care and desire to learn that our student-athletes have is, I would argue, not possible to match at any other institution in the country. They push each other to grow athletically, spiritually, and academically each and every day, and that focus on personal development leads to excellent results in the competitive sphere.

It’s very hard to pick only a few people who have magnified my experience here. Those that come to mind first are John Smith, Adam Puckett, Adam Haldorson, and Gabe Haberly. I have the privilege of working with this group every day, and each of these individuals pours into me personally rather than just on the track side of things. Adam Puckett goes out of his way to make sure I have what I need to lead my groups well, attends key meets, and checks in regularly. John Smith emphasizes family and spiritual development above all else, and I have learned so much from him on keeping first things first and ordering priorities appropriately. At the same time, he enables me to do my thing when it comes to coaching distance runners, and it is a lot of fun to work in an environment where your gifts are enabled and voice is heard. I have learned more from Gabe Haberly and Adam Haldorson about track and field in two years than I did in the prior ten years coaching anywhere else - they are phenomenally gifted coaches and mentors of their athletes. I have also taken up rock climbing and backpacking thanks to those two. Gabe and I have been on some all-day hikes, and Adam and I climb at least twice a week in Hadlock. Those times are where some of the best “work” gets done. I have learned that reflecting on what is going well and what needs improvement happens best in a non-office setting. Having people at Fox to bounce around ideas with and who regularly sharpen my skill set... that magnifies my experience working here more than can be well-articulated.

A few of my favorite places around Newberg include; Chapters. Good coffee and good ice cream. Two of the best things in one place. Handel’s in Sherwood. There is a theme going here... if it involves ice cream, I’m usually in. My wife and I are frequent visitors. Fulquartz Rd. Not great for hard workout runs, but awesome for seeing the Cascade range on a clear day and getting in a softer-surface easy run.

Somewhere I often find myself on campus is Hadlock. I didn’t have such a place in college, and it’s a great thing that George Fox has going for it. I try to get on the rock climbing wall at least a few times a week. The track (surprise!) is another place. The brand new track surface is amazing, and the Oregon sunsets as we finish practices never get old to me. It’s a remarkable place to put in hard work.

SPIRITUAL LIFE

2021-2022

What does it mean to be a people who are known for faithfulness? This year our pastoral team used Hebrews 11 to lead our community in an exploration of faithfulness as seen in Scripture and also in the many people throughout the history of the church who have sought to live their lives faithfully for God.

CLUBS

2021-2022

CLUBS | Stewards of Sustainability

Why did you join?

I joined this club because I believe in its mission. Stewards of Sustainability seeks to educate and empower the GFU campus with practical options in order to be good stewards of this earth. As our collective of students grows, we intend to provide events, workshops, and educational opportunities that foster inspiring and challenging conversation about how we respect the earth that we have been given and the people with which we share it.

How do you guys meet/what do you guys do?

This semester we worked in the community garden and donated produce to the bruin pantry. We watched a documentary about the flawed recycling system and a documentary about environmentalism and faith. As a club we organized a fundraiser to support #Teamseas, which removes 1lb of trash out of oceans, rivers and beaches for each dollar raised. As a club we raised around $225 which removes around 225lbs of trash.

CLUBS | Math Club

Why did you join?
Mathematics is extremely meaningful to me, and I wanted to be part of the math major community.
How do you guys meet/what do you guys do?

I helped create it! We talk about math and do fun math activities.

A fun memory this year!
Talking about fractal geometry!

CLUBS | Sources of Strengths Club

Why did you join?

I joined because I am passionate about health. I like that Sources of Strength has 8 aspects of strength that makes up a person. It helps us know that we have good things in our lives.

How do you guys meet/what do you guys do?

We meet in person in Roberts. We play a game or host some kind of event. We then spend some time sharing and learning about strength. Then we plan for how we are going to reach out to others.

A fun memory this year!

We threw a self care night that was so much fun. We painted, colored and played games. There was also tea and really good snacks!

Godspell Director’s Note

It has been 20 years since the George Fox Theatre produced its 2002 award winning production of Godspell. That year, the Kennedy Center American College Theatre festival invited us to perform Godspell at its Regional Festival in Bellingham, Washington. In order to fundraise for the trip, we also performed the show at the Winningstad Theatre in downtown Portland.

While I arrived one year after that moment in George Fox theatre history, one of the judges from the 2002 production later told me that the energy in Wood-Mar the night he saw the show was electric, filled with hope and reverence, as if he’d entered a worship experience that unabashedly celebrated a community’s faith. What a great compliment, and what a great vision for what theatre can do!

Godspell opened in New York City in 1976 and was heralded for setting the gospel in a contemporary urban landscape. The show was quirky, clownlike, and yet profound. The show was updated for its 2012 Broadway revival to bring it into the 21st century, but both its quirkiness and power remain. May you experience both the laughter and hope this musical has to offer tonight.

Much has changed in the world since our 2002 production of Godspell, but the need for this story remains the same. We are simply delighted to invite you back to Wood-Mar auditorium to experience this beautiful, prophetic, musical all over again.

Enjoy the journey,
Rhett Luedtke, Director

Friends,

Thank you for taking the time to read and journey with us.

This book isn't just about us, it's about you. Every ounce of content is because of the relationships, activities, and environments you engage with.

We hope this edition opens your eyes more to the community and individuals around you.

We encourage you to continue to explore and dive into life with purpose and intentionality.

May this prompt you to magnify the things that hold value and give purpose, and put aside the rest.

Holding you in the light,
The Student Collective Team
