CONTRIBUTORS

IRV BRENDLINGER is professor of church history and theology, George Fox University. He previously taught at Warner Pacific College. Irv and his family are members of Reedwood Friends Church in Portland, Oregon, where he is part of the pastoral team.

PAUL BUCKLEY enrolled last fall in the Quaker Studies Program at Earlham School of Religion after 25 years in business and academia. He is a member of 57th Street Meeting in Chicago.

LON FENDALL is vice president of academic affairs, Tabor College, Hillsboro, Kansas. Previously he served as dean of faculty at Wilmington College, director of the Center for Peace Learning at George Fox College (now University), and in several positions on the staff of Senator Mark Hatfield. Lon and his wife, Raelene, are graduates of George Fox and are members of Wilmington Friends Meeting, Wilmington, Ohio. His interest in this book reflects his graduate training in history and his visits among Friends in Ireland.

SUSAN JEFFERS is a member of Ann Arbor Friends Meeting and a Biblical Studies M.A. student at Earlham School of Religion.

KEITH R. MADDOCK is a member of Toronto Meeting in Canada. He holds degrees in religious education and theology and is presently writing for religious publishers, including Theology Today, Friends' Journal, and the Pendle Hill Pamphlet Series. He is also active in volunteer prison ministry in Toronto.

T. VAIL PALMER, JR., has been an active participant in the Quaker Theological Discussion Group from its inception, and previously served as editor for Quaker Religious Thought. In retirement from careers in higher education and accounting, he remains active in Quaker theological dialogue. He lives in Portland, Oregon, and is a member of Reedwood Friends Church.
