CONTRIBUTORS

ARTHUR O. ROBERTS has served at George Fox University since 1953 as professor of religion and philosophy, and since 1988 he continues his service as professor-at-large from Yachats, Oregon, where he lives with his wife, Fern. Author of many books of poems, Quaker history, and inspirational writings, Arthur had his latest book, Messengers of God; The Sensuous Side of Spirituality, published by Barclay Press last summer. He continues as editor of Quaker Religious Thought, a service he has performed well since 1990, and he is currently working on a book of Christmas poetry. He was just elected mayor of Yachats—by one vote—and will serve his community at least until the next election...or until a recount suggests otherwise.

R. MELVIN KEISER is professor of religious studies at Guilford College and a member of Friendship Friends Meeting, Greensboro, NC. His Quaker writings include “Inward Light and the New Creation: A Theological Meditation on the Center and Circumference of Quakerism.” (Pendle Hill 1991) His most recent book is Roots of Relational Ethics: Responsibility in Origin and Maturity in H. Richard Niebuhr (Atlanta: Scholars Press, 1996). His paper is a revised version of what was presented at the Friends Association of Higher Education at George Fox University June 22, 1996.

DEAN FREIDAY has performed many invaluable services to the Society of Friends and the larger world beyond during his short 81 years. Dean is most widely known for introducing and “translating” Barclay’s Apology into modern English and for his representing Quaker beliefs to other Christians within the National and World Councils of Churches. His most recent book, Speaking as a Friend, describes significant developments in the most recent discussions on the character of Christian communion and koinonia fellowship. Dean has been a long-time member of QTDG and has served as editor of Quaker Religious Thought for 11 years.
