MANDY LEE

Many years ago today

Wedding bells were ringing gay

In a village down in sunny Tennessee.

At a little church in town

All the folks were gathered round.

Down the aisle I proudly walked with Mandy Lee.

As we stood together there

A little sunbeam kissed her hair

Just as if it loved her too the same as I.

Then the parson bowed his head

Placed her hand in mine and said,

"Love and honor one another till you die."

Chorus:

Mandy Lee, I love you, 'deed I do, my Mandy Lee,

Your eyes they shine like diamonds, love, to me.

Seems as though my heart would break without you, Mandy Lee,

For I love you, Mandy, 'deed I do, my Mandy Lee.
