While this volume is not an academic work, it is formatted in a way that lends itself to group discussion. Byun also includes appendices with helpful resources for further study and even a sample sermon that is encouraged to be shared. This would be a helpful addition to academic libraries with collections that support ministry and social work students.

Anna Thayer has penned an epic fantasy trilogy entitled The Knight of Eldaran. In the first book of the trilogy, The Traitor’s Heir, she introduces the reader to Eamon Goodman. Eamon is a man conflicted because he has sworn allegiance to two very different rulers – the evil Master of the River Realm, Edelred, and the one true and rightful king, Hughan, who has declared Eamon to be his first knight. While in the city of Dunthriuk, Eamon gets lost in the trappings of power, esteem, and social standing provided by the Master and in the process loses himself and all thoughts of his allegiance to Hughan. However, now he has been commanded by the Master of the River Realm to confront Hughan with a terrible request: bring back the head of Hughan’s closest ally or pay the price. He has seven days to succeed in his ghastly mission or nearly a hundred of the men under his command will be tortured and slaughtered because of him. How will the king react to seeing Eamon, knowing the full extent of his betrayal? How can Eamon face the king after willfully committing such treachery against him and his people? But he must go; he has no choice.

Perhaps particularly in academia, it is useful to be reminded of the necessity of humility in theological reflection. Kelly Kapic keeps this reminder ever-present in this succinct, but thorough, argument for thinking through what we believe, why we believe it, and if our actions line up with those beliefs. Kapic states: “Given the
