T. Canby Jones is associate professor of religion and philosophy at Wilmington College, where he has taught for the past 8 years. He graduated from Westtown Friends School and Haverford College and received the degrees of B. D. and Ph. D. from Yale University. For two years he served pastorates in the New York Yearly Meeting of Friends, and is a member of the Continuing Committee on Greater Unity Among Friends. He is editor-elect of Quaker Religious Thought.

Paul A. Lacey, a convinced Friend, is a member of Clear Creek Monthly Meeting in Indiana Yearly Meeting and is assistant professor of English at Earlham College and a member of the staff of the Earlham School of Religion. He holds his bachelor's degree from the University of Pennsylvania and is a candidate for the doctorate at Harvard University. He taught at Pendle Hill during the 1960-61 year and lectured at the latest Cape May Conference on his special interest, spiritual problems in modern literature. He is the author of a number of articles on Quakerism and other themes.

Arthur O. Roberts has been professor of religion and philosophy at George Fox College since 1953. Earlier, he served as pastor of Quaker meetings within the Oregon, Indiana, and Kansas Yearly Meetings for 10 years. He holds degrees from George Fox College and Nazarene Theological Seminary, and received his doctorate from Boston University. He is editor of Concern, and is author of Through Flaming Sword.

Douglas V. Steere has been a member of the Haverford College faculty since 1928. Holding earned degrees from Michigan State, Harvard, and Oxford Universities, he has received honorary degrees also from Lawrence and Oberlin Colleges. He has been associated for many years with Pendle Hill, has served on various committees of the National Council of Churches, has traveled widely around the world as a "Quaker Ambassador" for the A. F. S. C., and is known for his leadership in the Protestant retreat movement. The half dozen books he has authored are highly regarded for their insights into the spiritual life.
