Contributors

Lewis Benson's paper in this issue demonstrates the familiarity with the writings of George Fox and the passionate conviction of their present significance that has led him to be widely recognized as the student of Fox in this generation. His Catholic Quakerism and many earlier appearances in the pages of this and other journals make clear why we are all his students. Lewis is a member of Manasquan, N. J., Meeting.

T. Canby Jones, the present chairman of the Quaker Theological Discussion Group, served for five years as the skillful and devoted editor of Quaker Religious Thought. He is the chairman of the department of religion at Wilmington College and a member of the Earlham School of Religion faculty.

Francis B. Hall is a graduate of Union Theological Seminary, where he wrote a B. D. thesis on Robert Barclay which played a major role in his becoming a Friend in 1948. The interest in Barclay has continued, as witness his lead essay in Vol. VII, No. 1 of this journal. Francis Hall and his wife, Pearl, have for many years been interested in developing a lifestyle in which commitment to spiritual growth and to social action are deeply intertwined; they helped found Kingwood, an intentional community of Christian families, and were for seven years members of the Society of Brothers. Since 1961 they have been directors of Powell House, the New York Yearly Meeting retreat center.
