Contributors

Scott Crom has been Professor of Philosophy at Beloit College, Beloit, Wisc., since 1954. He has degrees from Grinnell College and Yale University, and is a charter member and present clerk of Rock Valley Monthly Meeting, Rockford, Ill. For the last dozen years he has been an occasional resident or staff member at Pendle Hill, where he developed the hobbies of hand-weaving and potting; other hobbies include science fiction and dandelion-digging.

Maurice H. Friedman has been since 1967 Professor of Religion at Temple University, Philadelphia, and a member of the teaching staff at Pendle Hill. He has taught philosophy, philosophy of religion, and comparative religion for over twenty years at a variety of colleges and universities. He is the author of several books including the recently published Touchstones of Reality: Existential Trust and the Community of Peace, which contains, condensed, the essay on "Religion and Psychology" featured in Quaker Religious Thought, Vol. 12, No. 1.

John H. McCandless is a member of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting and of the executive committee of the Quaker Theological Discussion Group. He is currently serving as a member of the National Faith and Life Panel, an outgrowth of the St. Louis Conference of Friends.
