John McCandless' essay in this issue is a slightly revised version of the Carey Memorial Lecture delivered to Baltimore Yearly Meeting on Aug. 5, 1973. John McCandless is proprietor of The Hemlock Press and manager of QRT. He is the author of a volume of poems, Yet Still We Kneel.

Arthur O. Roberts is a graduate of George Fox College with a B. D. from Nazarene Theological Seminary and a Ph. D. from Boston University. He has taught at George Fox College since 1953, and since 1972 has been Charles Replogle Memorial Professor. He has on several occasions served as a visiting professor at Earlham School of Religion. Arthur Roberts has been on the Steering Committee of the Quaker Theological Discussion Group since 1960 and has contributed to several earlier issues of this journal. He has published two books, Through Flaming Sword and Move Over, Elijah, and is currently writing histories of Quakers in Alaska and of the Association of Evangelical Friends. He was co-editor with Hugh Barbour of Early Quaker Writings.

Enjoy QRT? You'll also like Friends Quarterly

● Friends Quarterly, next to QRT, is the Quaker publication most involved in theological discussion, both in single-issue articles and ongoing interchanges. Theology isn't FQ's sole topic, nor even its main topic. It is, however, a continuing and central topic.

● Friends Quarterly is the only English-language Quaker publication that specializes in middle-length articles. As such, it fills an important gap.

● Friends Quarterly is published in England. Many of its articles are wholly relevant to Quakerism anywhere. The specifically British articles (history, biography, comment on current matters) are long enough not to require reader background in London Yearly Meeting; they are therefore a first-rate introduction to British and European Quakerism.
