Douglas Gwyn, who has served as pastoral minister of First Friends Meeting, Noblesville, Ind., is a Ph.D. candidate at Drew University and a graduate of Union Theological Seminary, New York City, where he specialized in Old Testament studies. He commented on George Fox and prophecy in an earlier issue of QRT (Vol. 17, no. 1), and has been carrying the responsibility for promoting QRT since 1975. He works at the American Friends Service Committee's New York office.

Dean Freiday, a member of Manasquan (N.J.) Meeting, in addition to contributing a paper, makes his first appearance as co-editor, after guest-editing Vol. 18, no. 1, and writing on the doctrine of authority (Vol. 15, no. 1) and on ecumenism (Vol. 10, no. 1). Barclay's Apology in Modern English, which he edited, is in its third printing.

Nancy Jackson, raised a Congregationalist, became interested in the charismatic movement, and defines herself as a "Pentecostal Quaker." A graduate of Brandeis (sociology) and Washington universities (sociology of religion) and Earlham School of Religion (ministry), she does occasional preaching and serves on the Ministry and Membership Commission of West Richmond (Ind.) Meeting. Her ministries include Bible study, music, and nursing-home visitation. She teaches at Indiana University East.

Born in Germany, Ursula Windsor emigrated with her family to England in 1939. Dissatisfaction with their experience in mainline denominations, and the need to learn more about conscientious objection to war service, brought her and her artist husband, Arthur, into membership with Friends in 1952. Besides raising three children of their own, they have maintained a ministry through an extended family in Gloucester, England, for nearly twenty years. In 1976, they resigned from the Society of Friends "because of Friends' unwillingness to be, as they once were, a community which Christ rules and teaches." They remain convinced Quakers, and are active in the New Foundation group.
