CONTRIBUTORS

PAUL ANDERSON serves as Professor of Biblical and Quaker Studies at George Fox University, where he has taught since 1989, serving also as Extraordinary Professor of Religion at North-West University, Potchefstroom, South Africa. Author or editor/publisher of thirty books and over 250 essays, his most recent books include Following Jesus: The Heart of Faith and Practice; From Crisis to Christ: An Introduction to the New Testament; The Riddles of the Fourth Gospel: An Introduction to John; and John and Judaism: A Contested Relationship.

MICHAEL BIRKEL is a member of Clear Creek Friends Meeting and teaches at the Earlham School of Religion. He has written widely on Quaker spirituality, as well as on Jakob Boehme and on Qur'anic interpretation in contemporary North America. His most recent book is Quakers Reading Mystics.

CHERICE BOCK teaches in the creation care program at Portland Seminary of George Fox University, and is the creation justice advocate at Ecumenical Ministries of Oregon. She holds an MDiv from Princeton Theological Seminary, and is a PhD candidate in environmental studies at Antioch University New England. With Stephen Potthoff, Bock co-edited the book Quakers, Creation Care, and Sustainability (June 2019).

REV. DAVID HAHN, PHD, works, consults and coaches congregational leaders in the Northwest Washington Synod, ELCA. He also serves as an adjunct faculty at a variety of seminaries and theological institutions including Luther Seminary, St. Paul, MN; Seattle University, Seattle; Rochester College, a Church of Christ, non-instrumental graduate program, Rochester, Michigan; Wartburg Theological Seminary, Dubuque, IA.

HOWARD MACY lives happily in Newberg, Oregon with his wife, kids and grandkids, having retired from George Fox University as Emeritus Professor of Religion and Biblical Studies. He was first recorded as a Friends minister in New England Yearly Meeting and continues to serve as way opens, often through writing. His most recent book is Discovering Humor in the Bible: An Explorer's Guide. Howard actively participates in Wayside Friends Church (until recent renaming, Newberg Emerging Friends Church).

KEVIN J. O'BRIEN is professor of Christian ethics and dean of humanities at Pacific Lutheran University. His teaching and research focus on environmental ethics, with a focus on issues of justice and intersectionality. His most recent books are The Violence of Climate Change (Georgetown, 2017) and Environmental Ethics and Uncertainty (with Whitney Bauman, Routledge, 2019). He first studied religion as an undergraduate at Earlham College, and has been shaped by reading and talking with Friends ever since.
